2-Man Units Adopted for 6-Way Study Of Monopoly

Legislators, Executives Will Work in Pairs; Scope Left Open.

King Nominates O'Mahoney Chief

Sumners Vice Chairman, Leon Henderson to Be Co-ordinator.

By Robert C. Albright.

Half a dozen legislators and officials of six Federal agencies joined hands yesterday in an unprecedented investigation of monopolies at a two-hour meeting that stressed "fact finding" and struck a "co-operative" note, but failed to determine the range of the inquiry.

"Co-ordination" was the theme of the organization meeting. The double-harness legislative-executive group agreed on a study by units of two, with one legislator working with each department official in ferreting out facts and figures on trust and trade practices, prices and wealth concentration.

But the scope of the study awaited an outline to be presented next Thursday by each of the six Government agencies, showing anti-trust and price data already at hand, as a basis for future procedure. Whether the committee then will launch a far-flung search for new data or discuss first a probable remedy, remained undecided.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, co-sponsor of a Federal licensing bill as a cure for monopoly, unanimously was named chairman of the initial meeting. He was nominated by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, an opponent both of the O'Mahoney bill and of departmental participation.

Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee was elected vice chairman, on motion of Thurman Arnold, Justice Department representative on the committee. Sumners rushed back from Texas, where he is facing re-election opposition, to attend the meeting.

Borah Stresses Action.

Sumners proposed Leon Henderson, chief economic adviser of the Works Progress Administration, as executive secretary to "co-ordinate" the work of the many-sided inquiry and he was elected. Henderson is not a member of the committee. Meanwhile Isador Lubin, Labor Department statistician, served as acting secretary.

Full discussion by members, in which Arnold outlined a plan of procedure and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, stressed his belief that the inquiry should be directed toward legislative remedies, preceded adjournment. But all agreed a specific approach to the facts and solutions must await assembly and analysis of material now available.

There were all outward appearances of harmony. Senator King, most outspoken critic of Administration participation in the inquiry, called the session "peaceful, quiet and friendly."

"I think things are in pretty good shape," said King. "There was nothing disclosed that indicated any desire to burn witches."

Hearings to Come Later.

Sumners said he was "satisfied" with the initial meeting, but said conclusions of the group were "indefinite."

PWA Hires 1,000 Here While 500 Lose Jobs

Another Thousand to Be Employed as Pump-Priming Continues; Earmarking Puts End to Many Positions.

Washington's employment graph fluctuated sharply yesterday, but halted at a point above where it was a few weeks ago, with two hired for every one dismissed from Government service.

With the end of the old fiscal year, more than 500 Government employes were dropped from the rolls. Many had been paid from general relief funds and were thrown out of work by the new law which earmarks appropriations, leaving no money for discretionary expenditure.

These casualties, however, were more than balanced in the aggregate by the 1,000 employes taken on by PWA under the pump-priming program. A thousand more are to be hired by PWA for service in its seven regional offices.

In the year-end reductions, 150 were separated from the General Accounting Office, and in the Labor Statistics Bureau from 300 to 400 were out. Thirty-five were separated from Treasury and an undisclosed number from field positions in the Public Health Service. Eighty, who received notices some time ago, were out at the Bureau of Census.

In the Department of Agriculture 76 were furloughed ten days ago from the AAA, not because of the expiration of appropriation but through seasonal slump. Most of these men and women did tabulating work, and are subject to recall. There is a current seasonal decline in the Farm Security Administration, but the number affected is nominal.

The Census employes received their notices ten days ago and have been placed on a preferential rehiring list, which would guarantee that when openings occur those let out will have first chance for the jobs. A similar rehiring or preferential list exists in the WPA.

Treasury spokesmen reported a small drop in employment.

Meanwhile, the offices of Edgar F. Puryear, PWA director of employment, has for the past week been overrun with job seekers. All callers are told that PWA wants only

Case Against His Fellow-Officer Probably Will Be Nolle Prossed.

Edwin Scheid, suspended Falls Church policeman, was acquitted of the shooting of Theodore Daugherty last night in a jury verdict that brought cheers from more than 700 spectators crowding the Arlington County courtroom.

The circuit court jury came to its decision on the first ballot taken and reported the verdict at 11:17 p. m. It had been given the case at 10:26 p. m. and reached a verdict shortly after electing George F. Cook, Cherrydale banker, its foreman.

While friends rushed to congratulate the 23-year-old former policeman, officials indicated that the case against his fellow-officer, Herbert Knox probably would be nolle prossed. Knox was indicted for aiding and abetting in the killing.

His Parents There.

Scheid's mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scheid, were present when the verdict was returned and, in the five-minute ovation that followed, were among the first to reach his side.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas declared in his closing argument that Daugherty, 31-year-old Washington musician, was "shot dead like a dog" on the Lee highway March 20.

He declared Scheid's car followed Daugherty without headlights and that Daugherty knew only after he was stopped that a police car was behind him.

"When he saw them get out he backed up and started to leave. He's dead, and we'll never know why. It may have been the words which passed on the Frazier drive. Maybe he then was in fear of his life."

Calls It "Deliberate."

He called the shooting of Daugherty "a horrible, deliberate violation of the rights of a citizen," and told the jurors they would "write the final chapter on one of the worst tragedies which ever occurred in this county."

$15,000,000, 'Liberal' Sum, Set Aside for D. C. Housing

Strikes No Peril, Lochner Assures

Loan Will Cover 90% of Projects; Congress Must Give Rest.

The District Alley Dwelling Authority will apply for a contract to borrow $15,000,000 for slum reclamation and low rent housing projects "as soon as possible," Executive Officer John Ihlder said yesterday after the United States Housing Authority had earmarked that sum.

Nathan Straus, USHA administrator, set the money aside within 24 hours after receiving a request for $18,146,287 from the ADA for 12 projects here which would house approximately 4,000 families, or 12,000 persons.

At the same time John Locher, head of the Washington Building Trades Council, gave assurance that there would be no stoppage of construction because of strikes.

Meanwhile, the District Commissioners remained silent regarding the proposed $18,000,000 loan from the PWA for District projects. It appeared yesterday that the projects could win approval of Administrator Ickes only if more detailed plans were submitted so as to conform with PWA specifications. Since the District has no funds to spend for plans, officials were reluctant to discuss steps to expedite action in acquiring the grants.

Calls Week Successful.

Straus announced earmarking funds for the ADA was one of three facts which made the USHA's most successful week. Others were court tests in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, where favorable decisions will remove barriers to progress of the slum clearance and housing programs.

Altogether Straus yesterday earmarked $68,925,000 for 17 local housing authorities. This raised to a total of $427,299,000 the amount so far committed to 110 localities. With this, the Government's $800,000,000 long-range slum clearance and low-rent housing program passed the halfway point.

Other nearby cities for which funds were earmarked were Frederick, Md., $450,000; Martinsburg, W. Va., $450,000 and Parkersburg, W. Va., $875,000.

Sum Held Liberal.

In announcing the $15,000,000 for the ADA, Straus said he "did not believe it wise to encourage the belief that the District would get more." He said the amount was liberal based on Washington's population.

The loan will cover 90 per cent of the total cost of the projects, and the District Commissioners must obtain $1,500,000 from Congress. But Straus said he will lend the District the full amount, which can be repaid any time.

"We hope to enter into negotiations for the loan before the end of next week," Ihler said.

Anacostia Site Ready.

Among the sites for possible low-cost housing projects which the ADA submitted in its application was a 56-acre location along Ridge road, in Anacostia, which was bought by the housing section of the PWA. The USHA absorbed the housing section and officials yesterday could foresee no reasons why the site would not be available since it had been purchased for low-cost houses.

This site was one on which Ihlder believed work could be started as soon as plans could be drawn. The ADA has also submitted three inhabited alley sites on which slum reclamation work and housing projects could be started quickly if

G. O. P. Chiefs Plan Seminar With Experts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, July 1.—Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican program committee, announced today that the 150 members of the committee would "go to school" for a week next August at Northwestern University, in Chicago. They will engage in "round-table" discussions of the country's major problems with 25 experts.

The proposed rank-and-file questionnaire of 17,000,000 Republicans on national issues, it was also learned at the headquarters of the program committee today, will not be distributed until after the August meeting of the committee, if at all. The tentative questionnaire had been mailed to members of the Republican National Committee and of the program committee early in June for comment. The comment was in general so critical that a new questionnaire is now being revised and will be submitted to a vote of the program committee in August.

Meanwhile the Republican National Committee announced in Washington plans for an Independence Day observance in which chairman John D. M. Hamilton, accompanied by a large group of Virginia Republicans, will lay a wreath on the grave of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, near Charlottesville, Va. It will be the second occasion in two weeks on which Chairman Hamilton has dramatized in the South his contention that "the Republicans

Va. Wife-Killer Is Doomed to Electric Chair

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., July 1.—A Norfolk jury late today convicted J. C. Abdell, a merchandise broker, of first degree murder in the death of his wife, whose body was found in the gas-filled kitchen of her home here May 11.

A motion for a new trial will be argued Tuesday.

The verdict was returned against the 41-year-old defendant at 6:20 p. m. after the jurors had deliberated an hour and 40 minutes.

Abdell, who yesterday said that "suicide notes" found by his wife shortly before her death, were written by him for her use in getting a divorce, said:

"No matter what the verdict may be, my conscience is clear. I did not commit this crime."

The Norfolk man's counsel was quick with a motion for a new trial, and Corporation Court Judge R. B. Spindle, jr., delayed sentence until after argument on the motion.

Found at Hotel Here.

Abdell admitted in direct testimony yesterday that he quarreled with his wife on the day she was found dead and that she ran him from the house with a butcher knife, crying: "I'm going to kill you."

He said he got in his automobile and went to Washington, where he was notified at the Hotel Harrington that evening that Mrs. Abdell's body had been found in the kitchen of her home on Lafayette boulevard.

A slim brunette, who gave her name as Anne Dunn Williams, testified Wednesday she had lived with Abdell under an assumed name about a year. She substantiated his story that he returned from Washington the night of May 10 by saying he was in her room at 3 a. m. the morning of May 11.

The defendant said his wife suggested that he write notes with the idea in mind that they could be used as divorce suit evidence.

3 in Mine Trap Saved, 1 Sought; 5 Killed by Slide

Birmingham, Ala., July 1 (AP).—Rescue workers won a desperate race with time tonight for the lives of three miners entombed 3,000 feet underground in the Praco Coal Mine by the collapse of a rock wall, and brought them to the surface.

Five others were dead, either crushed by the rock or suffocated, while the ninth, workers hoped, was still alive and near rescue.

The first man reached alive was seriously injured. Two were suffering from bruises and lacerations. One, rescued earlier, died after his arm was amputated by physicians to free him from the debris.

The Praco mine, 20 miles northwest of Birmingham, is operated by the Alabama By-Products Co.

Superintendent J. W. Porter said only ten men were working under Wingard when the slide occurred. Two were known to have escaped, Gettysburg, Pa., July 1.—If the Rebels who fought here 75 years ago had not been "good Americans" they would have carried on a guerilla warfare up to this time, Gen. John M. Claypool, commander in chief of the United Confederate Veterans, declared today.

Gen. Claypool spoke in Gettysburg College Stadium before an audience which included Secretary of War Woodring, Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, Dr. Overton H. Mennet, commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and other notables.

Key Clew Locates $2,000 Drug Cache, $500 in Fake Bills

Detectives last night found $2,000 worth of a drug and $500 in counterfeit bills cached in the room of "Little Benny" Ertel, underworld character arrested here Wednesday and wanted in New York for the murder of a policeman.

The discovery was made after a squad headed by Detective Sergt. Joseph Shimon had conducted a two-day search that was begun with only an automobile key as a clew. The key led officers to Ertel's auto and two other keys found in the auto took the detectives to the rooming house.

The possibility that Ertel was an important figure in a counterfeit ring developed when Treasury officers said $5,000 in counterfeit bills, all bearing the same serial number as those discovered in Ertel's room, have been passed in Washington in the past six months.

First Successful Test of Conditions Completed Dawn-to-Dusk.

The first transcontinental nonstop flight ever made between dawn and dusk with the crew "on oxygen" the entire way was completed in 11 hours and 20 minutes yesterday by a giant Army "Flying Fortress," captained by Col. Robert Olds.

The plane, manned by three officers and five enlisted men, traveled from March Field, Calif., to Langley Field, Va., 2,317 miles, at an average speed of 204.6 miles per hour, Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson said. He added that the flight gives "additional evidence" U. S. planes and engines are the "best."

Described as Routine.

The flying altitude on the journey varied between 13,000 and 16,000 feet, it was said.

The "Flying Fortress" took off at 8:41 a. m. Thursday from March Field and landed at Langley Field at 8:01 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Described as a routine flight by Johnson, the feat nevertheless was considered to have established a landmark in aviation, opening the possibility of sub-stratosphere flights at much higher speed over greater distances.

"Goodwill" Commander.

Olds, who commanded a squadron of six 15-ton planes on an epoch-making goodwill trip to Buenos Aires recently, was accompanied on this flight by Maj. C. V. Haynes, copilot, and Capt. D. W. Chidlaw, navigator.

The gigantic aircraft, known as B-17B four-engine bombers, are manufactured by the Boeing Aircraft Co., of Seattle, Wash. The contract announced yesterday for 13 of the type will place on order or on hand a total of 52 of them, Johnson said.

Army officials pointed out that many civil and military fliers sought in the past to accomplish the achievement, but that their efforts had failed for various reasons, chiefly mechanical.

Chinese Bomb Ships Trying To Pass Boom

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, July 1.—A squadron of Chinese warplanes attacked Japanese troop positions and warships up the Yangtze river today in an attempt to halt the invaders' land and naval drive toward Hankow, Chinese provisional capital.

[Chinese forces, in a desperate drive to check the Japanese advance, were reported today (Saturday) to have smashed through the Japanese flank in central Honan, severing the lines between Anking and Hofei, the United Press said.

[Chinese reports said Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's crack divisions guarding the eastern flank of the Peiping-Hankow Railroad had virtually halted the Japanese drive.

[The Twenty-ninth Army troops spearheaded the Chinese counter-drive, reportedly cutting through to the walled city of Shucheng, 30 miles south of Hofei, which they occupied, driving out the Japanese garrison.

[The Chinese also occupied the city of Taochichen, west of Lake Chao, routing more than 1,000 Japanese rushed to the area from Hofei, Chinese military reports said.—Editor's Note.]

The planes' attack centered near Matowchen, 175 miles below Hankow, where the Japanese have been hammering for days to break a formidable defense boom the Chinese have laid across the river.

France Punishes Japan, Suspends 'Quota Imports'

Paris, July 1 (AP).—France tonight suspended importation of Japanese quota merchandise, approximately 25 per cent of all Japanese goods purchased in France.

The sudden order, which commercial quarters said was "the most drastic of its kind ever taken against any country," was in retaliation for Tokyo's failure to live up to an agreement to import into Japan in 1938 as much or more French goods as two years ago.

These sources said the apparent reason for Japan's failure to keep her side of the bargain was that she lacked foreign exchange to finance imports because of heavy purchases of war materials.

Roosevelt Drives Friends to See His New Cottage Site

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 1. (AP).—President Roosevelt, driving his own car, took some newspaper friends today to a house site he said he had wanted 20 years—and now has.

Tooth Shows Lions Roamed in Virginia 500,000 Years Ago

A yellowed bit of bone, found in a limestone quarry fissure near Front Royal, Va., yesterday was identified as the tooth of a lion which roamed Virginia forests half a million years ago.

Traces of the beast, long extinct in the Western Hemisphere, previously have been found in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Florida and California, according to Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, curator of the National Museum, who examined the tooth sent in from Limeton, Va.

Two other teeth discovered in the same Limeton quarry by Theodore Mussaeus proved to be relics of an extinct tapir and an ancient species of bear.

Candidates for Death Defy Ambulances

By Howard P. Wentworth.
No. 3 in a series.

Watch that fellow ahead! He's going to try to make it across the street before we get there! . . . Whew! He just made it!

That screeching Emergency ambulance siren usually spells trouble for someone. But to some Washington motorists it's merely a signal to take another chance. And to the average pedestrian, it's an open invitation to disaster.

A couple of trips across town, piloted by Ernest Yates, Emergency's veteran ambulance driver, convinced The Post's traffic observers yesterday that many Washingtonians care but little for their lives and limbs, or for regulations granting the right-of-way to emergency vehicles.

Yates maneuvered the ambulance into a heavy lane of rush-hour traffic. He pressed gently on the siren. A youth, driving his "collegiate," topless roadster, tried—with a gleeful smirk—to wedge his car between a line of autos and the front of the ambulance.

By a margin of inches, he missed the ambulance fender and turned to "cuss out" Yates for not permitting him to slip through a space hardly large enough for a good-sized baby buggy.

At Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, an elderly man in a white suit stepped from the curb. He saw the ambulance coming, hesitated, then jumped directly into its path.

Yates applied his brakes (never once did he exceed 35 miles an hour) and the foolhardy pedestrian escaped death. (That time.)

A few blocks further, a taxi driver, obviously attracted by the siren, stuck his head from the cab to see how far away the ambulance was. Then, literally daring Yates to hit him, he swung wide in a left turn—right in front of the hospital vehicle.

Driving in the center of car tracks along Massachusetts avenue near Union Station, the ambulance again barely missed striking a pedestrian who stepped carelessly from behind a stopped street car. This man turned and shook his fist as the ambulance passed.

A woman on Wisconsin avenue invited a visit from the undertaker by refusing to budge from her position in the street (she was in the center of the block and not at a crosswalk) as the ambulance bore down upon her. She stood her ground and Yates swerved wild.

Roosevelt Sets 4 Major Talks For U. S. Tour

He Will Help Candidates in Kentucky, Oklahoma and California.

By the United Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., July 1.—President Roosevelt tonight planned four major speeches on his forthcoming cross-country swing to California—all in States where primaries will involve the New Deal leadership in the Democratic Party as an issue.

The summer White House here released the itinerary, which calls for major addresses in Ohio, Kentucky, Oklahoma and California.

The President and his party will leave Washington Thursday at 10:30 p. m. (E. S. T.). In addition to the speaking stops, he will make numerous brief platform appearances.

"Going to Town."

Although White House attaches insisted that the President did not place any "political significance" in the itinerary, and that he was keeping aloof from local primary contests, it was regarded as almost certain that in at least one instance he will "go to town" politically.

That will be in Kentucky.

It is in that State that his Senatorial wheel-horse, Alben W. Barkley, majority leader, is being opposed for renomination by Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler. Some time ago Mr. Roosevelt publicly espoused the cause of Barkley.

The itinerary calls for the first stop at Marietta, Ohio, on July 8, when Mr. Roosevelt will deliver an address on the 150th anniversary of the founding of the first settlement in the Northwest Territory.

At 2:30 that afternoon the President will speak at the Latonia Race Track at Covington, and at 6:30 p. m. he will speak at Louisville from the rear of his train.

Off to Oklahoma.

The next stop will be at Bowling Green, Ky., — home of Senator Logan—where another platform appearance will be made. From Bowling Green the train will proceed by way of Memphis to Oklahoma City, arriving there at 5 p. m. (C. S. T.), Saturday, July 9.

At Oklahoma City the President will speak at the fair grounds. It is in Oklahoma that Senator Elmer Thomas, ardent New Dealer, faces opposition in the primary for renomination. This will be Mr. Roosevelt's first official visit to Oklahoma.

After an hour in Oklahoma City the President is expected to arrive at Fort Worth, Tex., and motor to the home of his son, Elliott, where he will spend Sunday, July 10. He will leave Fort Worth July 11 and arrive at Amarillo for a motor trip through the city the same day.

On Thursday, July 14, the Presidential party will arrive in Crockett, Calif., at 9 a. m. Here the party will motor around San Pablo Bay, making a brief inspection tour of the Mare Island Navy Yard, thence to Sausalito and across the Golden Gate Bridge to San Francisco. The President will motor through the city to the exposition grounds at Treasure Island.

The San Francisco speech may result in a blessing for one of the half dozen contenders now seeking the California Democratic gubernatorial nomination. At least two in the race are well known to the President, John Dockweiler, of Los Angeles, and J. F. T. O'Connor, former Comptroller of the Currency, a native of North Dakota who served in the Legislature of that State.

Reds Rule Radios On American Ships, A.F.L. Leader Says

New York, July 1 (AP).—Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoreman's Association, an A. F. of L. affiliate, charged today that the radio rooms of every ship leaving American ports in 1937 were under the control of the Communist Party.

Senator John J. McNaboe, chairman of a legislative committee investigating law enforcement before which Ryan testified, asked the witness if he meant "that it was their intention to cripple the steamship industry?"

"Positively," said Ryan. Since a year ago, Ryan said, a new union, the Commercial Telegraphers Association, has taken up the fight against the American Radio Telegraphers, which he said was headed by a communist.

McNaboe closed the hearing with a denunciation of both the Communist Party and the German-American Bund as "rackets."

Group to Describe Gettysburg on Air

Veteran members of the Gettysburg Correspondents Association, founded at the fiftieth anniversary Celebration of the battle back in 1913, will broadcast from the air this afternoon.

They will take off in a Pennsylvania Central Airlines plane, fly over the famous battlefield and describe the manner in which the event was covered 25 years ago. Their program will be over the Columbia network at 2:15 p. m.

Recounting their experiences from the skies will be John Jay Daly, of the Evening Star, who covered the story for The Post in 1913; Michael Flynn, managing editor of the Herald; Earl Godwin, of the Washington Times; David Lawrence, publisher of the United States News, and Bascom Timmons, correspondent for Texas newspapers.

Morgenthau Swears In Hanes to Supervise Administration's Tax Program.

Secretary Morgenthau swore in John W. Hanes as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury yesterday and assigned him to supervise the Administration's tax program.

The Secretary said Roswell Magill, Undersecretary for the last year and a half, had definitely decided to return to teaching law at Columbia University in September and would transfer his tax work to Hanes.

Hanes has been on the Securities and Exchange Commission since January. Forty-six years old, he is a member of a prominent Winston-Salem (N. C.) family. He rose in the securities business from a runner to senior member of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Charles D. Barney & Co.

Officials looked to him to try to harmonize the revenue needs of the Government with the needs of business.

Announcing Magill's decision to retire, Morgenthau said he did so with "deep regret." He said Magill had "rendered a great service."

William E. Dodd, jr., candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination from the Eighth Virginia District, said his father, former Ambassador to Germany, would not actively campaign for him.

The Federal Communications Commission has under consideration a report by its chief examiner recommending denial of an application for a radio-telephone station on board the barge "Tango." The barge is anchored near Los Angeles.

The application was filed by Volney G. Mathison.

In recommending denial of the application, the chief examiner, Davis G. Arnold, said:

"The owners of the vessel Tango have not testified as to the purpose for which the vessel is used, and the testimony of the applicant discloses that its primary use is for conducting games of chance, roulette wheels and slot machines. . . ."

Arnold said the need for the radio-telephone service was solely for the protection of life and property at sea, adding:

"If, however, the license were granted as requested, the shore station of the Southern California Telephone Co., which would received messages from the vessel, could not censor messages in order to ascertain whether or not they related to gambling information or were for the purpose for which the station is requested."

Mathison said that as many as 3,000 persons have been aboard the vessel at one time.

dentally' when he mentioned it himself.

"It may take all summer to gather all the material needed," said O'Mahoney. "When the time comes for hearings, we will hold them. But first the departments must outline the type of data they desire to present."

Departmental representatives told the group they will be able to present an "outline" of material they already have in hand next Thursday, but actual assembly of existing data will take from three weeks to a month.

Each Unit in Own Field.

It was indicated the Justice Department would present accumulated antitrust matter, the Federal Trade Commission will assemble Clayton act and unfair trade practice material, and the Labor Department data on wages and price relationships. Information on corporate income and taxation will be supplied by the Treasury, while the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission will present supplementary facts in their fields.

"Each of the executive agencies will report on the scope and type of material they care to present and outline the additional information we will need," said O'Mahoney. "In effect, each of the agencies will answer the questions: 'What does this investigation mean to you? What do you think we ought to go into?'"

The plan to assign each of the six legislative members of the committee to each of the six executive agencies, with members of Congress and executive agents coupled in pairs of two on each problem, was moved by Lubin, after preliminary discussion.

O'Mahoney denied that these units of two—yet to be designated—will be subcommittees in the strict sense, but indicated they may later be empowered to sit as committee units.

"The object is to have one member of Congress and one executive officer entirely familiar with every phase of each problem we go into," he said.

"They will deal with problems arising in the field of the departments designated. Then the committee as a whole will operate as a unit with at least two members thoroughly familiar with every problem before it."

Staff to Be Selected.

O'Mahoney said a staff will be named in addition to Henderson, as executive secretary and co-ordinator, but there was no discussion yesterday of special counsel or investigators. He said no specific industry or corporation figured in the discussion.

Questioned on the 12-man joint committee's power to compel testimony, O'Mahoney explained it has full power of subpoena but not the usual Congressional committee authority to cite for contempt. In such cases, he said the committee would have to go to the courts.

Prior to the meeting, Borah expressed his belief that the committee definitely will go into alleged price-fixing in the oil industry as one phase of the study.

"If we can find some way to prevent these oil magnates from sitting down at a table and fixing the price of oil, we will have accomplished a great deal," said the Idahoan.

Although no conflict on procedure developed yesterday, there is a sharp underlying difference among members on whether the group should concentrate on a legislative remedy or uncover all the facts first and make legislation a secondary consideration.

Both Borah and O'Mahoney openly have espoused their Federal licensing bill as the "remedy," but have not made it an issue in the committee. O'Mahoney has said merely that he thought after an examination of the facts "they would have to come to it."

A statement in the Congressional Record yesterday by Representative Eicher (Democrat), of Iowa, a House member of the group, indicated he at least partially shares their views.

Eicher States Position.

"Although my mind is open and receptive for such conclusions as may be impelled by the factual studies that our economic committee will conduct, I have already given considerable thought to possible remedies for at least one of the problems of the committee's agenda," he said.

Eicher reiterated "we should explore the possibility of corporate regulation in the national public interest through the requirement of Federal incorporation of corporations engaged in interstate commerce." He pointed out he also is sponsoring a bill "to close the loopholes in the anti-corporate merger Clayton act."

Other members of the full committee, all of whom were present yesterday, are Representative Reece (Republican), of Tennessee; Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities Commission; Assistant Secretary of Commerce Richard Patterson; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, and Chairman Garland Ferguson of the Federal Trade Commission.

Educators Pick West Coast City

New York, July 1 (AP).—The National Education Association today chose San Francisco for next year's convention but said if facilities there proved inadequate the meeting would be held in Chicago.

T. J. Walker, editor of School and Community, published at Columbia, Mo., was elected a trustee and Fred Cram, of Iowa State College at Cedar Rapids, was elected to the executive committee.

Sport Goods Exports Rise 27% in Period

Exports of American-made sporting goods increased 27 per cent to $1,085,711 in the first five months of this year, the Commerce Department said yesterday. Golf clubs were the only item on which exports declined.

noneers that Dr. Mennet had to talk to the crowd, held to a handful by rain, between the intervals of gusty roaring of guns.

"Our fervent hope," he said, "is that with our passing not even a scar will remain of the conflict in which we took part."

Gov. Earle sounded the note which pervades at this last reunion of the armies that fought here.

"We do not question now," he said, "the great forces which brought your armies into conflict; time has given us wisdom to see that those forces were not of any single man's making nor under any man's control.

Protected "Those Dear."

"All that we can see today, is that each one of you bore arms for the protection and defense of all that was near and dear."

"Many of you," he said, "have bridged the entire span of our country's history, in that you have met and have spoken with those who witnessed or fought in the Revolution. You were a part of the one and only—pray God the last—great internal conflict of the American people."

Woodring told the veterans "after the war came the miracle of reconciliation."

Compared Present Troubles.

"We of a later generation," he said, "are greatly heartened by the inspiration of the achievements of those veterans. Compared with the difficulties which they overcame our troubles seem small.

"Inheriting from them the initiative, the ingenuity and the courage so manifest throughout their useful lives, we may rely on our ability and that of our descendants to go forward with America to new heights, far beyond the dreams of our forebears."

Three Washington veterans, strangely enough all Confederates from the Capital they tried so hard to take three-quarters of a century ago, were registered here today. They are Peter Smith, 95, of 619 G street southeast; Brig. Gen. Emmett N. Waller, commander of the District Chapter, United Confederate Veterans, and Robert Wilson.

Joined Up at 14.

Gen. Waller, who lives at 2804 Fourteenth street northwest, was a boy of 14 when he joined Forrest's Cavalry as a drummer in 1861. He rode with Forrest until the next year, when he was graduated to trooper in Company K, Nineteenth Tennessee Cavalry.

Gen. Forrest wasn't the poorly educated man people think he was," Gen. Waller said. He stoutly belied the report Forrest said the way to win a battle is to "git thar fustest with the mostest men."

Wilson, 92, of 3548 Warder street northwest, was in the First Maryland Cavalry. He served, he said, in Company D of Lomax's Regiment, fighting in the Valley of Virginia.

Union Vet Expected.

Ephraim Phillips, only Union veteran from Washington, who was reported to have been here last night, was expected to arrive today.

Among the veterans here you find stories which lead you suddenly into ways you might not like to walk. There is Lewis H. Easterly, for instance, who stood today on little Round Top and told of the time he was a boy with the Union Army.

"Shucks," he said, "I was just a lifer. I was too little to fight but I wasn't too little to run."

He is only 81 now, much younger than most of the veterans here, for he was just 14 when he went into the Ninth Illinois Infantry. Now he lives in Gunnson, Col., and takes considerable pride in being commander of the departments of Colorado and Wyoming G. A. R.

Went to Colorado.

After the war, he said, he went to Colorado which was very wild country then and "lived on whisky and shooting."

Among the old soldiers in the camps here are a few who stood on the field of Gettysburg 75 years ago today. Those in blue went down from the town and its heights to the fields and woods below and there met the lean hungry men of Ewell's Corps. They fought and fell back until they stood on the hill which they defended for the next two days against two terrific assaults.

President Roosevelt comes here Sunday to dedicate the Gettysburg Peace Memorial as a climax of the four-day celebration of Gettysburg's seventy-fifth anniversary.

Widow Defends Longstreet.

Gettysburg, Pa., July 1 (AP).—Mrs. Helen Dortch Longstreet, of Lorton, Va., tonight blamed on "Southern politicians" criticism heaped on the head of her husband, Gen. James E. Longstreet, after the Battle of Gettysburg.

"Up until 1870 there was never a word against Gen. Longstreet's military record," she asserted.

"He was Lee's most trusted lieutenant in every engagement. Their relations were as affectionate as brothers up until the day Lee died."

"After the battle, Lee sent Longstreet to Chickamauga. Would he have done that if Longstreet had betrayed him?"

"Gen. Longstreet felt the glorious Lost Cause was lost forever; he felt the Republican ticket offered a more constructive program then. The Southern politicians hated him for that."

A new division was created yesterday at the Civil Service Commission as result of the executive order extending the merit system and there were shifts in personnel that promoted two staff members.

The Service Record and Retirement Division was split in two parts, forming a Retirement Division and a Service Record and Status Division. Lewis H. Fisher, now chief of Service Records and Retirement, will head the Retirement Division.

Miss Vivian Carlson, who has been with the commission since 1911, will head the new Service Record and Status Division. Miss Carlson now is assistant to Fisher and has been in her present post eight years. She becomes the only woman division chief in the commission. Miss Carlson is vacationing in Finland.

James B. Yaden, chief of the Examining Division and prominent in Washington civic affairs, will become chief of the Investigations Division, succeeding Henry A. Hesse, who retires in August upon reaching the statutory age of 70. Mr. Hesse has been with the commission since 1893, ten years after the commission's founding. His brother was the late Edwin B. Hesse, once superintendent of police.

W. A. McCoy, at present administrative consultant, is moved to the post vacated by Yaden.

Philippines Cancel Part in U. S. Fairs

Manila, July 1.—Jorge Vargas, secretary to Commonwealth President Manuel Quezon, who is on a tour of Japan, announced today plans for Philippine participation in the San Francisco and New York fairs next year definitely had been canceled because of lack of funds.

Vargas explained the cancellations were the consequence of Quezon's veto of a bill appropriating $1,000,000 of oil excise funds to finance Philippine participation in both fairs. Quezon acted after vigorous opposition from Washington to expenditure of the oil excise money.

Legion Defended By Col. Roosevelt

New York, July 1 (U.P.).—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, one of the organizers of the American Legion in 1919, in an interview tonight described as "trash" charges that the Legion was "Fascist, reactionary and unpatriotic."

The charges were contained in a 280-page monograph "The American Legion as Educator" written by Prof. William Gellerman of Northwestern University and published on Monday by Teachers College, Columbia University.

Straus Earmarks $15,000,000 For District Housing Projects

Alley

it were determined that they could qualify as being cheap enough.

The Wagner-Steagall act limits cost of each room in USHA financed projects to $1,250 a room and $5,000 per dwelling unit. To be determined is whether slum reclamation work on an inhabited alley site is to be included in the cost of the housing project if new homes are built on reclaimed slum sites.

For its slum reclamation work which does not embody construction of new houses the ADA may borrow $1,000,000 a year for the next five years from the Treasury. Application will be made next Congress for the first $1,000,000.

Finances Two-Year Project.

The $15,000,000 will finance a two-year housing project, Ihdler said. Some of the projects can be started shortly after the land is acquired and plans drawn, while other projects will require more time for acquisition of the land.

Locher said that the agreement reached between the USHA and the Building Trades Construction Department of the American Federation of Labor would be in effect here.

According to the agreement, labor will not strike during construction of specific projects. The prevailing wage for each type of labor will be written into the contract for each project. These wages will be paid throughout the project. It is also agreed that no jurisdictional disputes shall lead to strikes to tie up work pending arbitration between the unions and the authority. The agreement does not deprive unions to strike for other grievances, but they seldom arise.

Locher Praises Ihlder.

Locher said that Washington labor had cause to be especially pleased because "past experience with John Ihlder has shown us that he'll work the thing out to the advantage of everyone concerned."

In the securing earmarking which amounts to practically a promise of such a loan, the ADA will receive $5,000,000 more than was expected when negotiations were first undertaken for legislation permitting the ADA to borrow from the USHA. An amendment to the USHA act passed during the closing days of the last Congress added $300,000,000 to the amount the agency had to lend, and allowed the District to borrow more than the $10,000,000 originally contemplated.

Ihlder said that a slight increase in the ADA staff may be necessary. But recent amendments to the act make it possible to secure approved architectural and engineering service from local firms. This is a matter which will be taken up with the USHA, he said.

Investigators Get Data on Employer And Labor Rows

By the Associated Press.

Investigators for the Senate Civil Liberties Committee announced yesterday they had accumulated a mass of new data on the role in labor disputes of employers' associations, citizens' committees and similar public groups.

Senators La Follette (Progressive) Wisconsin, and Thomas (Democrat), Utah, obtained an additional $60,000 of Senate funds last month to study what they termed a new technique of using "the innocent and patriotic-minded for thwarting labor's rights."

The investigators said evidence would become public when the committee resumes hearings in mid-July. Attention will be directed to the "little steel" strike in Ohio last year.

Will Open August 1.

Republican National Committee members, Maj. Henry A. Wise and Mrs. Murray Booccok, and the Republican State chairman, Clarence R. Ahalt, have arranged a luncheon in honor of Hamilton after his address.

The summer meeting of the program committee, which was organized to make "an audit" of the New Deal and chart a tentative course for the Republican Party, will open on the Northwestern campus on August 1, and continue through August 4. The Republican summer study meetings will be a political innovation for the United States. In Great Britain, however, political parties currently sponsor similar meetings.

By the mandate of the Republican National Committee, the members of the program committee are obliged to make a thorough study of basic national problems before presenting to the Republican Party its final program of proposed national policies. On the list of such problems, scheduled for consideration in next August's meeting, are labor, agriculture, social security, finance, relief, civil service and political liberty.

Dr. Frank announced the following round table leaders:

Agriculture—Dr. Asher Hobson, head of the department of agricultural economies of Wisconsin University. Dr. Hobson was formerly director of markets of the State of Washington and an official of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Social Security—Morris A. Linton, president of the Provident Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia, Pa. Linton is now a member of the Advisory Council on Social Security appointed jointly by the Federal Social Security Board and the Senate Finance Committee.

Douglas on Finance.

Civil Service and Political Liberty—Earl Delong, assistant professor of political science in Northwestern University. Professor Delong is chairman of the Evanston Civil Service Commission.

According to present plans, the program committee does not intend to formulate and make public its final report until after the fall elections.

According to the announcement from Dr. Frank today, Northwestern University, assumed no sponsorship whatsoever of the round-table discussions or the public lectures.

Count Agrees In Court Not To Annoy Babs

Drunks at Arraignment as Dane Posts Bond of $10,000.

By the United Press.

London, July 1.—Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow was arraigned in Bow street police court today along with a drab assortment of drunk and disorderly cases on charges he threatened to shoot his estranged wife, the former Barbara Hutton. He was released on $10,000 bond.

The handsome Danish nobleman, dapper in gray but appearing pale and worried, was ordered to come before the court again Tuesday after he promised he would make no attempt to annoy or communicate with the countess.

The $40,000,000 five-and-ten-cent store heiress, represented by Sir Patrick Hastings, who revealed the supposed "firearm threat," remained with her 2-year-old son, Lance, behind the heavily guarded gates of her London home.

Now Court's Ward.

She is arranging to take the curly-headed child—made a ward of the British Chancery Court yesterday—to Venice later this month while she arranges for a separation and ultimate divorce in the Danish courts.

The 42-year-old count, upon whom the Woolworth heiress settled $1,000,000 when he became her second titled husband in Reno three years ago, denied making any threats of violence and said the only gun he owns is in the London town house and has been for some time.

The count, hustled into court by Scotland Yard detectives and police officers as he stepped from a boat train bringing him from Paris, made his promise to keep away from the countess after Sir Patrick Hasting's dramatic reference to the "firearm."

"He used threats toward the complainant whereby she apprehends that she goes in danger of her life or of some bodily harm that he will do or cause to be done to her," Sir Patrick said.

"It is most undesirable that either of us should say a word more than is necessary at this moment. It may not arise, as Mr. Birkett (Norman Birkett, lawyer representing the count) tells me the count does not now carry a firearm, and I think he says he never has. But I do not want to go into that."

But Birkett spoke up quickly.

"That firearm is in his house in Regent's Park and not in his possession. It never has been during any material time."

Agrees Not to See Countess.

Sir Patrick then asked "for an undertaking the count will not communicate with the countess," explaining "there are reasons for that."

"I certainly give this undertaking," the Danish nobleman said in a clear voice with scant trace of accent.

Escorted by a detachment of New York State police, the royal party was received by the Chief Executive and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Their plans included a drive over country roads, an informal dinner and the showing of a current moving picture on the President's projection machine.

Blood Tests Give N.Y. Couples Pause

New York, July 1.—The Desmond-Breitbart blood test law went into effect today, with many prospective brides and bridegrooms frightened away from marriage license bureaus by the requirement to present proof they had submitted to the test and were free from communicable syphilis. Not until 3 p. m. did City Clerk Robert L. Tudor issue his first license under the law. The quiet of the Municipal Building offered a strang contrast to the record-breaking June rush for licenses.

ing from a private citizen," and that a police uniform justifies its wearer in being the aggressor.

"If this boy was appointed too young, that's not his fault. But, in the light of age and experience, he did what he thought was right."

He pleaded with the jury not to "make this a double tragedy by ruining the life of an innocent boy. The worst you can say about him is that he made a mistake."

The case went before the jury after Douglas and Ball completed their 90-minute closing arguments in a special night session of the Arlington County Circuit Court.

Judge McCarthy in his instructions to the jury pointed out four possible verdicts: First degree murder—if they believed it premeditated; second degree murder or involuntary manslaughter, if not premeditated, and acquittal if they believed the shooting was done in line of duty.

Scheid's testimony in his own defense occupied the entire morning session yesterday. He appeared calm and self-confident as he said, "I shot at the tires and tank (of Daugherty's automobile) because I thought it was my duty to stop him. I wouldn't hurt anybody in the world."

Puts on Uniform.

He corroborated the testimony of his fellow-officer, Herbert Knox, who had said the day before that Daugherty attempted to run them down after they pulled ahead of his car. Like Knox, he maintained they followed him only to arrest him for speeding and shot at his automobile for the same purpose.

At Ball's request, Scheid donned the blue jacket and cap of his policeman's uniform to show how he was dressed the morning of the shooting. When the direct examination ended, Ball said, "Take off your uniform Eddie—for the last time."

"Eddie" had declared from the stand that he would never again engage in police work.

The cross-examination was along the line of the defense's contention that the young men shot in line of duty, not in self-defense.

"You didn't think you were going to be run over at any time when you shot at the gas tank, did you, Mr. Scheid?" Douglas asked.

"Never Said Self-Defense."

Ball jumped up and cried, "I never said we were pleading self-defense, I never intimated it. If you got that impression, you've been mistaken all through this case, Mr. Douglas."

Judge Walter McCarthy overruled Ball's objection to the question, and Scheid replied, "The car was going past me at a very rapid speed, Mr. Douglas." He went on to describe how he jumped from the path of Daugherty's automobile, fired one shot while upright and four more as he fell into a hedge along the roadside. In answer to a juror's question, he said he didn't have time to sight his gun.

At no time did he intend injuring Daugherty, he said. He did not realize the man was hurt until he approached the car, which had swerved off the road into a field. He still does not know whether he or Knox fired the fatal shot, he declared.

Finnish Visitor Calls Capital World's Most Aristocratic City

Earns Title Because Residents Neither Walk Nor Vote; Another Finds Buildings Here Are Like Fairy Castles.

Washington is the most aristocratic city in the world, according to Arthur Leinonen, member of the Finnish Parliament, because "your citizens neither walk nor vote. They merely govern."

Six leaders in Finnish public life, now in Washington after joining in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the first Swedish and Finnish settlements on the Delaware River, yesterday couldn't decide which is the more striking—the town's endless stream of automobiles or the anomaly of a voteless populace in a great democracy's capital.

Reactions of the Finnish tercentenary delegation to Washington folkways were relayed to The Post by Miss Sirkka-Liisa Virtamo, feature writer for a Helsingfors newspaper, who has accompanied her country's official representatives on their tour. Even on a holiday, Miss Virtamo's journalistic training asserted itself as she reported the opinions of her fellow Finns, rather than voice her own views for publication.

Victor Vesterinen, member of Parliament and editor, finds Washington buildings "like fairy castles and the parks like paradise," but wonders "where is Eve?"

The delegate from the Church of Finland, the Rev. Sigfrid Sirenius, expressed himself as overwhelmed by American hospitality and, for the first time, appreciative of "the importance of fasting."

"I have had to live 60 years to take this most wonderful trip of my life," said the cleric, as translated by Miss Virtamo. "Washington, after The Hague in Holland, is the most beautiful city in the world."

"Everybody tells you how lovely your city is, but we really mean it," the newspaper woman declared with feeling. "We're not just being polite."

Yesterday's program for the Finnish visitors included a luncheon given at the Shoreham Hotel by the Tercentenary Commisison, a trip to Mount Vernon and dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja at the 1925 F Street Club.

The party from Finland was joined by 50 prominent Swedish citizens at the commission's luncheon yesterday. Prince Bertil, of Sweden, who has been filling the engagement of his ailing father on the Tercentenary tour, is expected to arrive in Washington tonight.

32 Mussolini Aides Fail as Athletes

Rome, July 1.—Only 58 out of 90 special secretaries and inspectors of the Fascist Party succeeded in passing the first round of physical training tests held in the Forum Mussolini, under Il Duce's eyes today. The tests will be continued for three days.

The contest is the result of a recent decision of Signor Mussolini that all leaders must be examples, not only as regards party doctrines, but also as to athletic prowess, on which much stress is put by the regime.

Navy Rewards 24 Heroes in Panay Sinking

The Navy Department yesterday awarded citations and decorations to 24 officers and men of the gunboat Panay, bombed and sunk by the Japanese December 12.

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson addressed a letter of appreciation to Lieut. Comdr. James J. Hughes, wonded while in command of the Yangtze River patrol boat.

In the name of the President, Swanson awarded the Navy Cross to two other officers and 21 enlisted men.

"For extraordinary heroism" as executive officer, the cross was given Lieut. Arthur F. Anders, who gave orders in writing after he was wounded in the throat.

The decoration went to Lieut. Clark C. Grazier of the Navy Medical Corps, for "distinguished service."

One of the awards to enlisted men, all for heroism, was posthumous. It was granted Edgar W. G. Hulsebus, coxswain, who was fatally wounded. One other crew member and two foreigners also met death.

Officials said that recommendations to honor others aboard the ship were under consideration. To Capt. Frank N. Roberts, of the Army, the War Department already has given the Distinguished Service Medal, and Congress awarded the Navy Cross to four British officers for their "courageous action" in aiding victims of the bombing.

Indians, Climbers DescendPeakWith McCormick'sBody

Albuquerque, N. Mex., July 1 (AP). Under drizzling skies a little party of Indians and mountain climbers toiled over the steep, rocky side of Sandia Peak late today to bring back the body of Medill McCormick, 21-year-old scion of the noted publishing family. He disappeared June 23 on a mountain climbing expedition with Richard Whitmer, 20-year-old Princeton student.

Both boys apparently fell from the sheer heights of Sandia Peak, McCormick on one side and Whitmer on the other. Whitmer's broken body was found a week ago today and McCormick's late yesterday.

Funeral services for McCormick were set for tomorrow following arrival of his uncle, Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune. Burial will be at Albuquerque.

Both Sides Claim Gains in Intense Spain Coast Fight

Hendaye, France, July 1 (AP).—An intense battle for control of Spain's rich eastern coast developed tonight with insurgents hammering their way through Bechi village just south of the Majares River.

Insurgent dispatches said their forces swept government defenders from strong fortifications on Mount Ester and Solach. A government communique, however, said insurgent front lines had been driven back from Los Mallaes by a counter-attack.

The insurgents declared they seized control of an important junction of foothill roads south of Rio Secco and east of Bechi in the push southward from the former line between Teruel and Castellon de La Plana.

Two Asphyxiated For Crime Spree

Raleigh, N. C., July 1 (U.P.).—North Carolina's most turbulent crime era was closed officially tonight as relatives claimed the asphyxiated bodies of Bill Payne and Wash Turner.

The two desperadoes were executed at Central Prison today for slaying a State highway patrolman, George Penn, during an 11-month crime rampage finally stopped by G-men.

Preceding them in death was Wiley Brice, colored, electrocuted for slaying another colored man. The discarded electric chair was recalled because Brice's crime occurred in 1926. Gas became official method of execution in 1935.

France, Turkey Form Accord as 'Good Neighbors'

Paris, July 1 (AP).—France and Turkey clasped hands today in a good neighbor pact, concentrated in the Sanjak (district) of Alexandretta. A military agreement also was reached by which France and Turkey jointly guarantee the internal and external security of Alexandretta.

It was provided that from today equal numbers of Turkish and French troops would be stationed in Alexandretta, the 10,000-square-mile district which formerly belonged to Turkey.

They are to preserve order pending a plebiscite on whether the Sanjak shall became an autonomous Moslem state or be rejoined to Syria, which France has ruled under a League of Nations mandate.

Chinese Bomb Ships Seeking To Break Boom

Japan

ously damaged one warship.

The best available reports were that Matowchen itself now is in the hands of the Japanese, although the Japanese ships apparently had not cracked the boom.

There was bloody fighting two miles to the east, where land forces were struggling for possession of the small mud-house village of Hsiangkow.

On the north bank the Chinese still were blocking the Japanese advance from Tsienshan against Taihu, despite the fact the invaders were equipped with tanks and artillery. Tsienshan is about 80 miles north of the river, and Taihu about 25 miles south of Tsienshan.

Continued developments pointed to Hukow as the next immediate focal point in Central China. Hukow, 435 miles up the river from Shanghai, is 25 miles upstream from Matowchen and 150 miles from Hankow. It lies on the south bank of the Yangtze, strategically important at the mouth of an inlet to Lake Poyang.

Hongkong, July 1 (AP).—Many women and children were reported killed today as nine powerful Japanese bombing planes rained more than 100 bombs on the important South China port of Swatow.

Many of the bombs fell into crowded residential sections and the city's hospitals rapidly were filled to overflowing.

Buildings were destroyed on a large scale.

The attack began at 5 p. m. and lasted for an hour and a half. Six of the planes circled over the city for 30 minutes before the first bomb was loosed.

(The United States gunboat Asheville has been standing by at Swatow for protection of Americans. Sixty-nine have been reported in the Swatow consular district and 25 in Swatow itself.)

Peiping, July 1 (AP).—An elaborate peace plan for ending the Chinese-Japanese war, under which China would be carved into at least five autonomous units, today was reported being drafted by Chinese members of the Peiping provisional government and their Japanese advisers. The plan also provides for spheres of influence for European powers.

The five autonomous Chinese states envisaged by the draft plan were said to be:

North China, Inner Mongolia, East China, Central China, under the present Chinese government at Hankow, and South China.

It was said Japan would recognize Gen. Chiang Kai-shek as head of the Hankow regime if he would accept the scheme.

Broker Asserts President's Son Got His Fees

Says Bank Deprived Him of Insurance Business to Aid Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 1.—Counsel for a Boston insurance broker today charged the National Shawmut Bank had "wrongfully" deprived him of commissions on an $800,000 insurance policy because it wanted the business to go to James Roosevelt, son and secretary of the President.

The charge was made before F. Delano Putnam, assigned as auditor to hear a civil suit brought by the broker, Arthur D. Cronin, against the bank for $31,750, plus interest, the amount he claimed he would have received in commission.

Cronin contended he complied with the bank's request to obtain the insurance, but that, at the last moment, the bank withheld the order from him and gave it to the insurance firm of O'Brion Russell.

Romeny Spring, Cronin's counsel, declared Roosevelt was associated with that firm at the time the transactions between the bank and Cronin were being carried on. He said Roosevelt and John Sargent maintained offices with the O'Brion Russell firm, and shared in its expenses and its profits.

"Was the bank's motive," Spring asked, "to let this clever, experienced man (Cronin) pull its chestnuts out of the fire by getting a low policy, and then shove the commissions over to Sargent, Russell and Roosevelt?

"Isn't it a reasonable inference that if there hadn't been any firm named Roosevelt & Sargent, wouldn't we have gotten the insurance business?"

Counsel for the bank contended the institution had never entered into a contract with Cronin to obtain the insurance, and compared the transaction to a request to a real estate dealer to find or sell a house.

Doctor Defends Abortion on Girl, 14, After Assault

London, July 1 (U.P.).—Society women crowded into dingy Old Bailey Court today to hear Dr. Aleck William Bourne, one of Britain's leading obstetricians, open his fight against a possible life sentence by challenging an old law that permits abortion only to save the life of mother or child.

The surgeon, protesting against "crazy and cruel" interpretations of the law, stoutly defended his professional conduct in performing an abortion on a 14-year-old girl who had been raped by a soldier of the Royal Horse Guards.

The same court last Wednesday sentenced David Evan Thomus, 23, to four years in prison for attacking the girl on April 27 at the Royal Horse Guards barracks in Whitehall.

Writer Kills Wife And Then Himself

Cortland, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—Chesla Sherlock, 42, former editor of St. Nicholas Magazine and prominent writer, and his wife were found shot to death today at their farm home on the Virgil-Dryden road.

Coroner Claude E. Chapin said Sherlock shot his wife with a shotgun, then shot himself.

The coroner also said neighbors told him Sherlock had suffered business reverses.

Christian Science Subject Is 'God'

"God" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 20:5: "We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord" (Jeremiah 31:34).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "As the mythology of pagan Rome has yielded to a more spiritual idea of Deity, so will our material theories yield to spiritual ideas, until the finite gives place to the infinite, sickness to health, sin to holiness, and God's kingdom comes 'in earth, as it is in heaven.'"

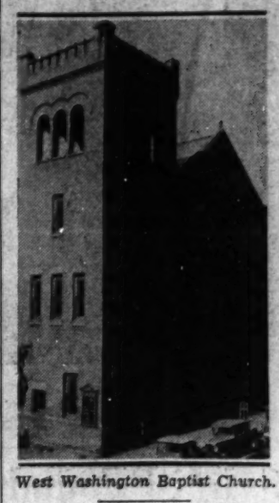
West Washington, 72 Years Old, in Drive for $3,000



West Washington Baptist Church.

On June 19, 1941, the congregation of West Washington Baptist Church anticipates celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary in a renovated church auditorium and launched a $3,000 campaign to that end last week, as a feature of the seventy-second birthday observance.

In 1866 the Rev. James Nelson, who came to this city as general missionary of the Maryland Baptist Union, established a congregation with a nucleus of 11 men. Their first house of worship was a chapel on Market street. Later, through the efforts of Mr. Nelson, a frame building was erected at the corner of Thirty-first and N streets northwest. It was burned on February 9, 1899, and on Easter Sunday, April 12, 1903, the present building was occupied.

Of the 14 pastors at West Washington, the Rev. Charles B. Austin, present minister, has had the longest tenure, coming here in 1923.

Much Ado About Nothing.

Apparently the hubbub over Secretary Ickes' remarks regarding the District's request for PWA funds is entirely due to a misunderstanding. There seems to be no ground for the assumption that loans and grants may be denied the local community because its detailed plans have not yet been filed with the PWA. Nor can it be assumed that the Commissioners have been negligent in the preparation of such plans.

The message from the Commissioners which Secretary Ickes declared to be inadequate was never designed to be a formal application for funds. Rather it was a preliminary notice to the PWA that the District has a program of improvements for which loans and grants are desired. Perhaps the Commissioners made a mistake in requesting an earmarking of funds for their program. But in any event their communication could not be reasonably regarded as a formal application for funds.

In making a statement to that effect Mr. Ickes was obviously right. If he had confined his remarks to newspapermen to the seeming inadequacy of the Commissioners' request, perhaps no misunderstanding would have arisen. Indeed, if Mr. Ickes' later warning that the District must comply with the same rules that govern applications from other communities had been considered against a background of fact, the teapot nature of this tempest would have been apparent.

So far as can be learned, the facts are that the District is going steadily forward with the preparation of detailed plans required by the PWA with the object of making formal applications for each project as soon as possible. In this work of planning there seems to be full co-operation between the PWA and the local authorities. Certainly there is no misapprehension on the part of the Commissioners as to the necessary steps for participation in the national public works program.

Moreover, the preliminary list of District projects has served a useful purpose. It has given the PWA as well as the public information as to what the local government would like to accomplish with the aid of public works funds. No controversy based on a simple misunderstanding should be permitted to cloud the negotiations essential to obtain Federal aid for these useful community improvements.

Basing Point Problems.

The action of the United States Steel Corporation in eliminating price differentials at a number of so-called basing points has given rise to a good deal of discussion and some adverse criticism. In the steel industry prices are quoted from certain designated basing points, centers of steel production. Freight charges from these centers to delivery points are then added, regardless of the location of the mills actually making delivery.

Heretofore basing point prices on identical products have varied. For instance, prices on certain products at Pittsburgh have been quoted below Chicago prices. As a result mills in the Pittsburgh area have been able to ship into Chicago territory. Consumers have thus been able to draw supplies from an extensive area.

Elimination of a large number of basing point differentials by the United States Steel Corporation obviously will alter existing competitive relationships. Already complaints are heard that the changes will injure small steel concerns and increase the competitive strength of "Big Steel," which will be able to enjoy more fully the advantages of extensive geographical distribution of its plants. Small companies wishing to ship to any distance will be handicapped. Consumers likewise will have less choice in placing orders. In short, the proposed modifications of the much criticized basing point system will limit the marketing area for smaller concerns.

It is interesting that modification of a pricing method frequently denounced as an interference with competitive price fixation and cited as evidence of monopolistic domination by the United States Steel Corporation should bring cries of dismay from small concerns and independents. The merits and disadvantages of the basing point system have been debated endlessly. Expert opinion indicates that good as well as evil has resulted from what is undoubtedly a highly artificial system for quoting prices. But it is apparent that a system of long standing under which markets have been developed and competitive relationships established cannot be suddenly overturned without giving rise to serious maladjustments.

The price problems of the steel industry offer a tempting subject for study by the joint legislative-executive committee which is about to launch its monopoly investigation. There is great need for an unbiased examination of the ways in which such price systems have developed. A realistic instead of a theoretical approach to problems of this sort would contribute to a better understanding of the economic system and help Congress to legislate more intelligently on matters of business practice.

A Question Of States' Rights.

"With some reluctance," President Roosevelt has attached his signature to the $385,000,000 omnibus flood control bill. Its one feature which he evidently wholly approves is the controversial amendment slipped into the Senate bill giving the Federal Government title to land where dams and reservoirs are built without the consent of the States concerned. "Insofar as this bill provides for an improvement in jurisdictional control over the properties involved, and a more adequate control over consequential power developments," the President said, "it is a definite step in the right direction."

This comment is singularly revealing. It amply justifies the conclusion that in the guise of a flood-control measure an act has been passed empowering the Federal Government to develop power projects wherever it chooses by depriving the States of control over their own water resources. Only as the session was nearing its close did Congress realize the significance of this departure from the usual policy of seeking the State's consent before condemning property within its boundaries. Then it was too late. The conference bill was rushed through the Senate in spite of last-minute efforts to delete the offending amendment.

The practical consequences of the extensive powers of condemnation given to the Federal Government under this act are best shown by a specific illustration. The late Senator Copeland pointed out that under the amendment all power developed in New York State by improvement of the St. Lawrence would be under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government to be used as it desired. According to Senator Walsh, the Federal Government "may even take control of river waters in localities which are entirely within the confines of one State and do not enter into the domain of interstate relationship."

Many of the sharpest critics of the proposal to take over State properties, and even to acquire under condemnation proceedings projects which the Federal Government has helped finance, have no quarrel with the Administration's general power policies. Their objection is based upon a much broader issue than either power production or flood control. In the words of Governor Aiken of Vermont, the basic issue is "one of maintaining a balance of power between State and Federal government."

The amendment approved by the President opens the way to a dangerous extension of Federal ownership and control of natural resources at the expense of the States. Indeed, Senator O'Mahoney in appealing for defeat of the amendment warned the States of the "arid West" that its passage would reduce them from "the status of sovereign States to that of mere satrapies of the Federal Government . . . dependent upon the favors of Washington."

The President's satisfaction with the "improvement in jurisdictional control over the properties involved" will thus evoke strong dissent in many quarters where the centralization of power in Federal hands is viewed with growing apprehension. By contrast with this major defect of the act, the failure to link flood-control projects more closely with a general Government plan seems a minor consideration.

The New Stock Exchange Head.

The selection of William McChesney Martin, jr., as the first full-time paid president of the New York Stock Exchange formally inaugurates a new system of management designed to make the exchange a more representative public institution than it has been in the past.

Actually the transition from the old to the new era occurred some months ago when the exchange members voted their approval of the reorganization plan worked out by a special committee in response to pressure from the SEC. Mr. Martin served on the reorganization committee and has since filled the position of chairman of the Board of Governors and acting president. Thus, his personal and technical qualifications for the arduous duties of his new office have already been given a severe preliminary test.

Mr. Martin's conception of the Stock Exchange as a public service institution should assure close and effective co-operation between him and the Federal regulatory authorities in a joint endeavor to raise standards of trading conduct. Under public-spirited leadership there is good reason to believe that the Stock Exchange will provide effective self-regulation with a minimum amount of Government supervision and coercion. That is the professed objective of the SEC, despite former threats of drastic action if the Stock Exchange failed to eliminate abuses through reformation of of its own practices.

Under any kind of supervision and regulation constant vigilance will be required to suppress old abuses and prevent new ones from cropping up. However, prompt and decisive action should be much easier hereafter with the Stock Exchange headed by a well-paid official who has no conflicting duties or distracting personal loyalties to confuse his judgment or stay his hand. Mr. Martin's comparative youth is also a valuable asset in a position that calls for a dash of pioneer spirit in dealing with old problems in new ways.

The London Naval Accord.

The Anglo-French-American naval accord reached at London this week represents a new effort by those powers to preserve what little is left of the principle of naval limitation originally embodied in the Washington treaty of 1922 and, later, in the London agreement of 1930. Those treaties, with their provisions for both quantitative and qualitative limitations of naval armaments became obsolete at the end of 1936 as a result of Japan's unwillingness to be bound by them any longer.

The action of the island empire left the door wide open to an unrestricted and ominous naval race. Such an unwanted development the democratic powers sought to restrain by signing the London naval treaty of 1936. Placing no limit on fleet tonnages, which obviously was out of the question with Japan unwilling to accept any arrangement that did not assure her parity with Great Britain and the United States and the latter powers unwilling to grant such parity, the 1936 pact did bind the three signatories to certain qualitative limitations.

The most important of these was the fixing of an upper limit of 35,000 tons for capital ships and of 16 inches as the maximum caliber of guns. While the treaty was open for signature to other naval powers, it also contained an escalator clause so that, under certain circumstances, the qualitative limitations could be exceeded.

The new London accord, fixing an upper limit of 45,000 tons for capital ships, stems directly from that clause. It was made necessary by Japan's refusal to furnish information with regard to her naval construction and the suspicion that exists in some quarters that this silence on Tokyo's part cloaks the construction of battleships exceeding the 35,000-ton standard.

This suspicion may or may not be justified. But the other powers are taking no chances. If Japan is building such superwarships they, too, want to be free to build them. Indeed, under the terms of the new accord, they can build 45,000-ton warships whether Japan does or not.

For the moment, however, none of the three democratic powers plans to spend its money for such monsters. The two battleships which Great Britain is to lay down in her 1938 naval program will not exceed 40,000 tons. The French appear equally reluctant to go beyond the 40,000-ton limit. And American naval plans thus far contain no provisions for the new-limit naval monsters.

The immediate significance of the new London accord, therefore, is to be found in the fact that it constitutes a warning to Japan that the other great naval powers are prepared to keep up with the island empire in naval construction and, if necessary, to outpace her. But the harassed taxpayers of all the naval powers will hope that it will not be necessary to carry out this threat and that, on the contrary, the London accord may lead to a new limitation agreement.

On July 5, Too!

As Washington breaks out its slacks and bathing suits for the three-day week-end, it can take considerable satisfaction in the fact that in one notable respect it has insured for itself a sensible celebration. The sale of fireworks being prohibited in the city, there should be a minimum of burns and infections incurred.

Unfortunately, the District's two next-door neighbors are not among the growing number of States which forbid the sale of fireworks. It is to be hoped they soon will fall into line, not only for their own sake but also because such action would end the bootlegging now rampant along the District's borders. The co-operation of Maryland and Virginia is needed to help prevent repetition of the bitter record reported for the years 1900-30 when more persons died celebrating the Fourth of July with fireworks than were killed during the entire War for Independence.

Unfortunately, the other principal danger of the coming week-end does not yield as readily to protective legislation. If it did, traffic fatalities would be unknown. As matters stand, highway accidents have been decreasing during recent months not only in Washington but throughout the country generally. This is heartening news, but the battle is far from won. Greater efforts toward driving safely are needed and especially so during the next three days when all roads will be abnormally crowded.

In the sensible words used recently by an enterprising insurance group: "Let . . . the motorists of America travel with extra care . . . so that on July 5 we may continue to enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Einstein says there's no such thing as matter; Dr. Aanis asserts that space doesn't exist, and Sir Arthur Eddington declares the entire universe is merely the figment of man's imagination. Scientists are mighty smart, but there are times when we think they haven't got a lick of sense.

A Woman's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read the article published in The Post of June 25 signed, "Terrified." I couldn't help but be a little amused at the man's loyalty to his sex.

I am a woman and a very observant one at that, in my travels. I do not drive, but am just a passenger in our car. Let me say that when "Terrified" limits his nerve-racking and harrowing escapes to avoid accidents to woman drivers entirely, I believe the man must be driving blindfolded!

First, look at the taxi drivers, with their sudden stops, crazy zig-zagging, and other crazy maneuvers. The majority of them wouldn't need much more experience in order to become daredevil riders. Take a drive around Hains Point. Perhaps the name Speedway has been misleading people. I have seen cars, driven by men, go speeding around there, honking their horns, passing everything on the road. Maybe they are just getting away from the terrible women drivers on the District streets?

As for "Terrified," I think that he is probably a driver of a commercial vehicle, the kind of a driver that goes around honking his horn, and thinking that every car should get up on the sidewalk, and give him a clear road, women especially. I bet he would love to drive fire truck or an ambulance.

Stuart At Gettysburg.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: To those who are interested in the military and tactical part of the Gettysburg campaign, I would suggest that they read a book written by the late Col. John S. Mosby, entitled "Stuart in the Gettysburg Campaign."

It gives a full and absolutely accurate account of how that battle was brought on at Gettysburg by an accidental occurrence. It also shows from war records that Gen. Jeb Stuart was carrying out Lee's orders in all his movements.

The accusation against Stuart, as being tardy, was made after Stuart was dead—when it was safe to make it. Col. Mosby shows it was a fabrication.

"Roosevelt" Debt?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Permit me to compliment you on a recent editorial under the head "Easy to Talk About." Your comment on the continuing New Deal deficits and the mounting national debt and the crushing load of taxation necessary to pay off the vast indebtedness is all sound and illuminating.

But I was especially pleased to see you call the stupendous liability the "Roosevelt debt." More than once have I suggested and I urged that it be so designated. Editors could do much to encourage the public to the just habit of saying the Roosevelt debt." That would keep the public keenly aware of the authority responsible for the growing obligation.

In justice, the taxes imposed by this Administration and its successors to balance the budget and finally to pay off the debt should be called "Roosevelt taxes." Our deepening fiscal tragedy will a millstone about the neck of Mr. Roosevelt's successors. They should be relieved of the odium by habitually calling the tax burdens "Roosevelt taxes."

By all propriety, the debts and taxes should pass into history and be permanently known as the "Roosevelt taxes" and the "Roosevelt debt" for which the taxes have to be imposed.

We vote his way—
Heigh-ho! Heigh-ho!

From An "Ex-Communist."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Communist Party of America claims to be the true democratic party. Russia, they say, is the only real democratic country in the world today.

Under a 50 per cent democratic government, such as our own, any man has the right to set himself up for election to any political office on an independent ticket; what would be done to a man in Russia who did such a thing in opposition to Stalin?

Though much has been written on the subject, comparatively few Americans know what the plans of this party are with regard to supplanting our present governmental system with a totalitarian system. How many Americans are aware that every New Deal scheme—NRA, Supreme Court packing plan and the rest—are right up the Communist Party's alley?

There must have been some secret knowledge during the 1936 political campaign of Roosevelt's intention regarding the Supreme Court because this writer heard several prominent Communists make contemptuous remarks about "those stubborn nine old men;" that "something must be done to them." Moreover, though the "party" had its own candidates in the field they voted almost solidly for Roosevelt.

All this New Deal muddling is heartily indorsed by the Communist Party. Those who doubt my statements may prove them to themselves by procuring some of the literature published and freely sold by the "party."

I have written this letter because I don't want to be regimented. I am a human being with feeling and wish to have the right to engage in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness which our present governmental system guarantees me.

"Ex-Marine" Defers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has been kind enough to publish one or two letters from me signed "Ex-Marine."

Now comes a better writer of letters who also signs himself "Ex-Marine," and, to my delight, raises several visible blisters on one Barefoot, who so stupidly attacked peace societies. This second "Ex-Marine" does it so much better than I that I am vacating the title. I'll fight in another class.

Barefoot's attack on the peace societies exhibited the sort of shallow thinking that characterizes ultra-ultra patriots. To them, blinded by what they consider the true love of country, nobody is an honest American unless he sees Reds in every peace society.

"Ex-Marine" No. 2—now No. 1—learned about war over there. I didn't get over, but I can read and think. There are a few millions of him, and many millions of me, and if we can pound away hard enough to make people think through national and international problems, instead of fighting their way through, if we can replace the hysteria of war with the calm of ordered thought, we can prevent war.

The "cringing weaklings" are those who go along with the heedless crowd that beats the war drums. It takes a brave man to be a pacifist these days. As we marines used to say, "A good marine can do anything." CHARLES E. PLANCK.

Wiggins To Americus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Junius Americus," in the letter columns of The Post of June 28, compares F. D.'s "devastating attack" upon the Copperheads of our time with Don Quixote's assaults upon the windmills of Andalusia. I do not recall that Cervantes records that the windmills stood up on their hind legs, or coils, and frothed at the mouth in reaction to the devastating onslaughts. Of course, the mills are impotent except for wind!

In his apologetics for the fast-fading national income of six years ago, and his vexation with present multiplication of national income, Mr. Americus goes round and round in a repetitious whirl with the gold content of the dollar until he is dizzy to the fact that the docile dollar today buys as much average banana oil as it did in 1932.

The Taxicab Insurance Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, by signing the taxicab liability insurance act, at long last has brought to a happy end what is probably the most consistent, determined and unprincipled lobby leveled in opposition to any necessary and progressive local legislation ever proposed. Until now, the combined forces of Washington civic, business, labor and Government interests had fought many years to no avail for favorable action on a law compelling public motor vehicles to maintain a minimum degree of financial responsibility.

Though far from perfect, this law will accord a measure of protection to our people from a class of public carriers heretofore brazenly immune from legal process. Inequities and ambiguities in the law are apparent and must be remedied through intelligent administration or remedial amendments, but in the meantime, we should all heave a sigh of relief and give thanks to those principally contributing to final passage of this legislation.

We should especially rejoice because the people's will as expressed unanimously and authoritatively by Washington's organized citizenry proved victorious over the efforts of selfish interests pledged to block any taxicab liability bill, regardless of public opinion or need. The value of continued favorable publicity supporting the legislation and eminently fair editorial comment by all of Washington's newspapers explaining the issues involved cannot be overestimated.

Members of Congress primarily responsible for this triumph are entitled to the eternal gratitude of all our citizens as well as that of the countless visitors to the Nation's Capital destined to travel upon our highways. We should be exceptionally grateful to Congressman Nichols and Senator Tydings, House and Senate conferees who labored many days in conscientious toil to bring about an agreement between the two Houses, for their constant desire to serve the best interests of all the elements involved, including the drivers, operators, and the public, and for their refusal to be tricked by the bill's enemies into defeat through discord.

Senator King and Congressman Palmisano, chairman of the Senate and House District committees, are to be congratulated upon the full support and co-operation tendered by them to the cause during the long struggle. We are greatly indebted to Congressman O'Connor, chairman of the House Rules Committee, for his assistance in skillfully dislodging the conference report from the Speaker's table in sufficient time to have the Senate dramatically concur in the House bill just a few moments before the descending gavel brought final adjournment to the Seventy-fifth Congress.

Space will not permit the naming of all those organization representatives who contributed so much of their time and energy toward the favorable consideration of this law. However, one man is entitled to unstinted praise for his indefatigable interest and optimism. Were it not for the unfailing patience and tireless activity of Mr. Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia Automobile Club, in rallying supporters each time the bill seemed to have become hopelessly buried beneath parliamentary red tape and misunderstanding during the closing weeks of the session, it is quite probable that today we should be mourners at the bier of a bill smothered to death by the all-too-kind embraces of its friends.

The Post Impressionist

How Think You?

THE occupants of the rocking chairs on the broad piazza of the rooming house, the "Loch Raven," pointed across Pennsylvania avenue to the spot where the man had been killed an hour before. The truck had been unable to stop for the sudden halting bus in front of it and had run up, crossed the sidewalk and struck the man standing on the grass looking at the tennis players.

It was a gorgeous spring day as much like the day of creation as mortals could wish for. The girls playing tennis had been dashing around gaily, the old men on the "Loch Raven" porch had been rocking with half-shut eyes, the fat Italian woman washing the windows of the old brick house next door had touched with her bare arm whenever she could the hairy arm of the young man pushing the sticking windows up and down.

The visitor from Texas (that was all that could be found out about him) had strolled across the wide grass plot and was leisurely surveying the players, thinking of nothing probably when the truck struck him down and while the hearts of a dozen onlookers went cold with horror his skull was mashed under the lumbering, uncontrollable wheels.

* * *

An hour later only a piece of white paper marked the spot where the blood had soaked into the mashed grass and dirt, and the old men in the rocking chairs pointed to it, telling everyone coming home from work all the particulars they could. But no one knew anything about the victim. The Italian woman had crossed herself and murmured piously to the young man that the poor man's hour had come and that was that.

It is certainly more comforting to believe that even when an accident overtakes a man, it is the result of a prearranged destiny. This attitude is strongly marked in the much-discussed book, "Joseph in Egypt," Thomas Mann's latest work.

Joseph is conscious in every action, every decision, every turn of fate that he is fulfilling his destiny as God has chosen him to carry it out. His heritage, naturally, would make such a belief mandatory. He dedicates himself to it. When he is thrown into the pit, it is a just punishment for being overweening; when he is rescued, he does not deny to his mourning father the tale of his death since it is part of God's plan that Jacob's son should begin life anew in his seventeenth year; when he was sold into Potiphar's household, he took care not to be put into some routine duty that might prevent his meeting the master as he feels certain that God has ordained that he is to play a great part not only in Potiphar's house, but eventually in Pharoah's.

The opposing philosophy that "Life is its own justification. There is no other aim to it, no other meaning, no other purpose, and if we think otherwise, we are foolish," is sustained in an even more recent book, "Earth Memories," by Llewelyn Powys.

He urges that "every religion is as brittle as an empty snail shell in dry weather, as quick to disappear as cuckoo-spit in a summer hedge that conceals at its center no greep fly. The secret to be remembered is that nothing matters, nothing but the momentary consciousness of each individual as he opens his eyes upon a spectacle that knows naught of ethics . . . All ends in death."

These then are the opposing philosophies which consciously or unconsciously are subscribed to by every man with varying degrees of adherence. In the first is a dignity that sustains our poor little egos. In the second, there is no such compensation, but Powys, for one, urges it as an attitude that will fix more attentively our consciousness on the beauties of this earth:

"The truth resides in matter's proud processions as they are revealed to our uncertain senses. In what can be seen, in what can be heard, in what can be touched, tasted and felt, there is no treason. Only these messengers can be trusted. MARGARET BREWER.

Nine Men In A Boat.

As a full-fledged varsity version of a sink-or-swim success theme, the story of Boston University's racing crew is one for the college class book. Rowing, it seems, was a luxury their athletic budget couldn't support when the call went out for candidates last fall.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology offered the use of its indoor rowing machines; Union Boat Club lent an old shell; the Browne & Nichols School coach let the B. U. crew tag along with the prep school boat, devouring technical tidbits on practice spins. The boys even dug down into their campus slacks to pay their traveling expenses to the regatta against Rollins and Manhattan.

The rest is one grand, smooth-stroking success story for the 8½ stalwarts who started with less than the proverbial shoestring. The fellows who swing the scarlet sweeps for Boston wound up their first season with a championship cup—plus a deficit of $132 that they have pledged themselves to pay out of their first week's summer earnings. And was it worth it? Just ask the boys in the borrowed boat! Many an unseen bystander will agree the story of their upstream battle beats the best baccalaureate sermon ever preached.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Victory.

The "big show" won't be here this year,
The clowns will skip their call;
Take down the posters full of cheer
That cover barn and wall!
The pachyderms you will not see,
Before no cage you'll pause . . .
But it's a famous victory
For union labor's cause!

II.

The "steam pianner" won't be heard
Across the plain and hill;
You will not follow, word by word,
The barker's voice so shrill;
You will not hear the circus band
Nor know the side-show's fun . . .
But Whitehead is triumphant and
The union cause is won!

III.

The wagons huge, of red and gold,
Won't stir the children's hearts;
There'll be no Roman drivers bold
To race those Roman carts;
The snow-white horses won't be here
With riders spry and gay,
But it's a victory, my dear,
For Ralph's A. F. of A.

IV.

You won't get up at dawn this year
And bark a knee or shin
In rushing to a siding near
To see the show come in;
You will not hear, much to your grief,
The wagons in the night . . .
But cheer up, boys, a union chief
Has won another fight!

V.

The elephants you will not feed,
Nor sip pink lemonade;
You will not see the latest breed
Of gymnasts unafraid;
You will not hear the lion roar
Nor see the hippo fat . . .
But Mr. Whitehead's won his war
And that, you see, is that!

VI.

The trapeze acts, the dip of death,
The center ring's big troupe
Of acrobats that take your breath—
They now are in the soup.
The music, laughter and the joy
Are stilled . . . the lot is dark . . .
But Mr. Whitehead, ah, my boy!
He made 'em toe the mark'

FAIR WARNING.

Only six more months to do your Christmas shopping.

So Long!

Exit June, the month of roses—
Washouts, fogs and few tanned noses.

Here we are in July before we noticed it! The Glorious Fourth right on our heels! And hardly time to dig up some newer and hotter expletives for the week-end auto trip.

American Holiday.

Off by motor over the Fourth,
East and west and south and north!
Howling when the lights go red,
Shocking all by what we said.
Under bridges, over pools,
Violating all the rules;
Glaring, frowning, tired, sore—
Using words unheard before.
Ah, so merry and so gay,
Shouting into air quite blue,
"Aw, get over!" "Nuts to you!"

Sigel Poling hauled milk on part of the route for Eldred Jacobs last Wednesday while he was having his pick-up overhauled.

THE EXCEPTION.

Make known your needs to Uncle Sam—
The line forms on the right;
Just state if you look better in
A dark suit or a light.
Don't hesitate to state your size
As into line you prance,
But just remember that you get
No extra pair of pants!

The New Deal has a super-heart,
It bleeds a lot for you,
So specify if you want brown,
Or gray, black, green or blue.
There's nothing that it will not give
Within its modest (?) means,
Except—fair warning, one and all—
An extra pair of jeans!

Ten million dollars' worth of suits
It soon will give away
So Sidney Hillman's garment men
Can make the suit-trade pay.
So get yourself a nice new suit
For summer or for fall;
There only is one limit, boys—
One pair of pants, that's all!

SINCE THE OUTBREAK of the Sino-Japanese conflict in July, 1937, our trade with both China and Japan has been substantially reduced. During the first four months of the current year our imports from China were 61 per cent less in value than in the corresponding period of 1937, and our exports to that country declined in the same period by 31 per cent. Likewise our import and export trade with Japan declined respectively by 45 and 13 per cent.

For military reasons Japan has curtailed both her exports and her imports, and the unofficial boycott on her goods by people of this and other countries has curtailed her exports still further. Some of the effects are seen in the accompanying chart. While our exports to Japan declined during the latter half of 1937, they turned up sharply in 1938, when Japan's large purchases of aircraft and other war supplies offset in part the curtailment of her non-military imports.

Because of rigid exchange restrictions imposed by Japan, the United States Department of Commerce has suggested that American exporters should require "confirmed irrevocable letters of credit" before making shipments to that country. Meanwhile, the Department of State has made known its efforts to discourage the sale of bombing airplanes to the belligerents by American manufacturers.

Rights In China

By Joseph H. Baird.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

AS THE JAPANESE war machine pushes its way farther and farther into China and Japanese administrations are being set up in its wake, serious concern is being felt by officials here lest Washington and Tokyo soon may be engaged in a bitter diplomatic struggle over America's long-cherished extraterritorial rights in that strife-torn country.

Although, thus far, Tokyo has avoided any clear-cut statement as to its future policy toward foreigners in the conquered areas, there are many indications that the ancient rights of Americans, Britishers and other aliens to trial for misdeeds in their own consular courts is in danger of abolition in vast areas of China which now are controlled by the Japanese.

Indications of the trend of Japanese policy were seen last week when, after an American had been involved in a brush with a Japanese sentry and American officials protested the sentry's authority, the Japanese spokesman in Shanghai announced that foreigners in the conquered areas of China were just as subject to Japanese law as if they resided in Tokyo. The Department of State promptly protested to Japan, calling attention to America's treaty rights in China. Afterward the Japanese spokesman modified his sweeping statement to say merely that foreigners must respect Japanese military authorities.

Spokesman's Retreat Seen As Procrastination.

TO THE DISCERNING here the spokesman's retreat appeared merely a strategic move designed to avoid bringing this dynamic question to a head at this particular time. And there is little doubt in the minds of officials that Japan, if it is victorious in China, will attempt to abridge the existing commercial rights of foreigners there just as effectively as it has done China's "Three Eastern Provinces"—now Manchukuo.

If successful in this policy, it would mean that the approximately 6,000 Americans now residing in China, together with some $132,000,000 of United States capital now invested there, would come under the jurisdiction of Japanese-controlled courts. The possible consequences of such control are obvious. It could easily result in the impeding of the business activities of any foreign corporation which was offering unwelcome competition to a Japanese rival in the Chinese market.

The origins of extraterritoriality lie back early in the nineteenth century when fast Yankee clipper ships began visiting Chinese ports and competing with the British in the lucrative Oriental trade. Colonies of American businessmen and missionaries began to spring up in the Chinese treaty ports. Naturally enough, they became embroiled in occasional fights or controversies with the Chinese. As Chinese juridical practice is based on entirely different concepts and methods from those of the Western World, foreigners bitterly resisted trial in the native courts and constantly were importuning Washington for assistance.

As a result, the United States early in 1844 sent Caleb Cushing as special envoy to the Celestial Empire to negotiate a treaty. Cushing had two aims: To insure that Americans resident in China would enjoy the same legal protection which they would have at home, and to negotiate a trade treaty providing Americans with commercial opportunities in China fully as advantageous as those accorded the nationals of the most favored nation.

Cushing Successful At Wanghai In 1844.

AFTER LONG and tedious negotiations, during which, as he later wrote, he found it is necessary to speak with "extreme plainness and frankness," Cushing, on July 3, 1844, signed a treaty with the Chinese authorities at Wanghai. He gained both his goals—"most favored nation" treatment for American trade and the exception of Americans from the jurisdiction of Chinese courts.

Trade provisions were incorporated in Article 2, which read:

Citizens of the United States resorting to China for the purpose of Commerce will pay the duties of import and export prescribed by the tariff . . . They shall, in no case, be subject to other or higher duties than are or shall be required of the people of any other nation whatever . . . And if additional advantages or privileges of whatever description be conceded hereafter by China to any other nation, the United States and the citizens thereof shall be entitled thereupon to a complete, equal and impartial participation in the same.

Extraterritoriality was assured in Articles 20 and 25, which said in part:

Subjects of China who may be guilty of any criminal act toward citizens of the United States shall be arrested and punished by Chinese authorities, according to the laws of China, and citizens of the United States who may commit any crime in China shall be subject to be tried and punished only by the consul or other public functionary of the United States thereto, according to the laws of the United States . . .

All questions in regard to rights, whether of property or person, arising between citizens of the United States in China shall be subject to the jurisdiction of and regulated by authorities of their own government . . .

As a result of this treaty, there have been established in China a number of consular courts, highest of which is the Federal court in Shanghai which is a part of the jurisdiction of the United States Federal court in San Francisco.

Germany And Russia Exceptions To Privilege.

VIRTUALLY ALL of the great powers, with the exception of Germany, which relinquished its extraterritorial rights in China after the World War, and Soviet Russia, which declines extraterritorial privileges for ideological reasons, have their systems of consular courts in China.

In late years extraterritoriality has been bitterly resented by some of the more ardent and fiery Chinese nationalists, who regard the system as degrading to Chinese dignity and as a symbol of its bondage to Western powers. Indeed, under the motivation of the Kuomintang, the Chinese Nationalist Government made serious diplomatic efforts between 1929 and 1931—when the Japanese invasion of Manchuria diverted its attention to a more serious problem at home—to persuade the powers to relinquish their extraterritorial rights.

During his term as Ambassador here, the late Dr. Wu Chao-chu spent most of his time in negotiations with the State Department looking toward the abolition of extraterritoriality. Fundamentally the American position has been to recognize the fact that our extraterritorial rights in China are the remnant of nineteenth century imperialism and that they should be surrendered whenever China can demonstrate that it has achieved sufficient national unity and order to assure Americans of a fair trial based on Western concepts of justice. Officials, however, have not been convinced that China is yet ready to meet that test.

If Japanese arms are victorious and if China emerges a vassal state, it is anticipated as a likely consequence that Japan will insist on the abolition of extraterritoriality and perhaps also on the withdrawal of the nearly 4,000 Marines now stationed in China, under treaty right, to protect American citizens in the event of public disorder.

Such demands, if made, will probably be strenuously resisted. The Stimson doctrine refuses recognition for territorial gains won by force of arms. There would be no basis in international law or American foreign policy for acceding to such demands.

Near East Pawn

By Barnet Nover

Kamal Ataturk Wins Again.

ALONG THE MEDITERRANEAN'S northeastern elbow, at the point where the Turkish and Syrian borders join, is the Sanjak of Alexandretta, newest pawn in the complicated game of high politics being played for such desperate stakes by the European powers.

Yesterday the Sanjak (Turkish for administrative district) was under French rule or, to be somewhat more technical, was part of the French mandate of Syria. Today its nominal status is that of a potentially autonomous area in a prospectively independent Syria. But tomorrow it may be Turkish, even as it was in the days when the Sultans ruled at Istanbul and the Ottoman empire extended over a large part of the eastern Mediterranean world.

What is more, this valuable territorial prize, with its magnificent harbor of Alexandretta and its mixed population of Arabs, Turks, Syrians, Circassians, Kurds and Armenians, is likely to fall into Kamal Ataturk's lap without the firing of a single shot, through diplomacy alone.

Hitler and Mussolini may well envy their fellow dictator of Ankara. But to no small extent it is they who made possible his prospective triumph even as it was they who indirectly made it possible for him last year to re-establish Turkish control over the Straits.

• • • •

THE SANJAK problem has gone through several stages since it emerged on the international scene in the fall of 1936.

At first it was just another minority problem similar in nature to so many others which have plagued the world before and since the war. When the Blum government agreed to relinquish the mandate over Syria and permit the formation of an independent Syrian-Lebanese federation, Turkey immediately asked France what was to happen to the Turks in Alexandretta.

A prolonged wrangle followed. Ultimately both the Ankara and Paris governments agreed to turn the whole Sanjak question over to the Council of the League of Nations for peaceful adjustment.

The plan that emerged at Geneva was to give the Sanjak fairly complete autonomy within the Syrian-Lebanese federation and with the added safeguard of League protection for the minorities within the area. With the consent of Turkey and of France, the Council then sent to Alexandretta a commission empowered to set the stage for a plebiscite of the inhabitants and the establishment of a democratic government.

• • • •

ALEXANDRETTA contains a great many Turks, but just how many nobody knows. During the course of the registration for the plebiscite, however, it became apparent that the 40 to 50 per cent total claimed by the Ankara government as the proportion of Turks to the total population was exaggerated.

As a consequence the Ankara government lost interest in the League's scheme and began to press for a settlement of the Sanjak problem by direct negotiations between Turkey and France. And what made matters worse, from the Turkish point of view, was the fact that in anticipation of the election, the non-Turkish elements in the Sanjak began to form an anti-Turkish coalition.

From the French point of view the Turkish attitude of hostility toward the League scheme was embarrassing. France could not, unilaterally, modify the terms of the mandate over Syria so as to change the status of Alexandretta. That could only be done by the League and the League had already, with the consent of both the Turkish and French governments, decided what should be done. To override the League on the Sanjak matter would mean to deprive the Geneva organization of one of its few recent victories and emphasize its impotence more than ever.

• • • •

BUT IF FRANCE was tempted to stand pat with respect to the Sanjak issue the developing European crisis made it extremely difficult to do so. In the first place it was obvious that in view of the Spanish and Czechoslovak situations, France could not afford to employ force to prevent a possible Turkish seizure of Alexandretta and the surrounding region. Indeed, the Paris government had to reckon with the possibility that an intransigent attitude on its part with respect to Turkish demands concerning the Sanjak might throw Kamal Ataturk into the arms of Hitler or Mussolini or both.

Certainly both the Fuehrer and Duce would be greatly tempted to do all they can to forward Turkish ambitions with respect to Alexandretta if that meant creating complications for France. Nor could the fact be ignored that both the Berlin and Rome governments have been courting Turkey for some time.

Moreover, since the Montreaux conference, Turkey has become by her own right, a powerful factor in Mediterranean politics. She controls the Straits and thus dominates the only effective passageway by which Russian aid could come to France and vice versa.

• • • •

Thus, instead of resisting Turkish demands regarding the Sanjak, France has apparently capitulated to them. Although the terms of the Franco-Turkish agreement which has just been signed have not yet been made public the presumption is that France has agreed to give Turkey a stake in the Sanjak and probably, ultimate suzerainty over that area.

In return it is presumed that Turkey will co-operate with France in the eastern Mediterranean. Since Turkey is and for many years has been an ally of Soviet Russia and since Kamal Ataturk has also been drawing closer to Great Britain, a development signalized by Great Britain's recent action in extending very large credits to the Ankara government, something like a Triple and, possibly even a Quadruple Entente (Turkey-France-Great Britain-Russia) appears to be emerging in the Near East.

It may prove a factor of very considerable importance in the European balance of power. But the repercussions of the Franco-Turkish deal are likely to be felt not only in Europe but throughout the Mediterranean as well.

Historical Novels

By Bernard DeVoto.

Richer American Scenes.

IN OUR TIME the historical novel has abandoned the purely romantic themes of valiant deeds and great names and has become primarily realistic and psychological, serving also this generation's demand for social awareness. But the very fact that it is involved with history and issues from a tradition implies a residuum of romantic formula which, so far, has proved permanent. It has become a finer art than it ever was before in American literature.

The cycle is by no means complete; the forces which have produced a stronger and more self-conscious nationalism in America show no sign of abating, and the interest in historical fiction which is one manifestation of them seems likely to continue. There are plenty of unoccupied fields, unused subjects and themes. Two developments in particular seem likely; fiction ought soon to occupy the high plains and the western mountains, which it has used only trivially up to now, and Southern novelists will some day move backward from the Civil War to the society that it destroyed.

Beyond that, only one prediction may be made confidently. When a really distinguished novel about the class struggle appears we shall never think of it as proletarian but only as human experience. So, if our generation produces a masterpiece of historical fiction, we shall feel it as life, not as history. We shall realize with something of a shock that, like "Huckleberry Finn," it is a historical novel after all, for like "Huckleberry Finn," it deals with an earlier time. And the shock will be due to the fact that, like "Huckleberry Finn," the time and place will be much less important than the life it contains.

For whatever the special limitations of the historical novel are, its finest virtue is that of any novel. It is the virtue of fiction that has nothing to do with history, the miracle of giving imagined experience the momentary illusion of human life.

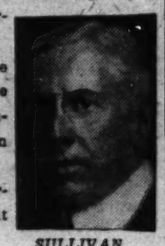
Editors, Senators Or Independent Body Urged To Settle Discrepancy In Reports Of Politics In Kentucky WPA.

THIS DISPATCH is meant for all readers, of course. It has a special interest for newspaper publishers, editors and writers.

There is in Washington a condition which I shall describe by quoting from an article dealing with the Administration and the press, by a thoughtful and impartial commentator, Mr. Harlan Miller of The Washington Post:



SULLIVAN.

"There is a deep and serious rift between the Government and the press, a smouldering warfare which breaks out one day at the White House, another day at the Capitol, and intermittently in other Government offices."

That statement is accurate. Every newspaperman in Washington knows it. Many throughout the country know it.

It is a seriously dangerous situation. If not cured it may go on to one of two ends. President Roosevelt may propose to put newspapers under some degree of regulation—some think he will do this if he continues to have confidence in his power.

If not that, then newspapers will be discredited. One might say that much has been done already to discredit newspapers. Frequent remarks of Mr. Roosevelt at press conferences and elsewhere have that tendency. Statements and actions of other New Dealers have that tendency. If it goes on, a condition will arise in which charges made by or in newspapers will be deprived of force. To say "It's just a newspaper story" will be regarded by criticized officials as a sufficient answer. Such a condition would be bad for newspapers and public.

I have been describing the discrediting of newspapers by Mr. Roosevelt and other officials. I do not, at this point, dwell on the discrediting of newspapers by themselves—except to state that a newspaper discredits itself when it is inaccurate. It discredits itself and to some extent discredits all newspapers.

Remedy Prescribed Based On Current News.

IS THERE any remedy or preventive? Are the newspapers willing to have this situation go on? There is a possible remedy. I describe it by means of a specific example, now fresh in the news.

Some weeks ago the Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers sent a correspondent, Mr. Thomas L. Stokes, to Kentucky. Mr. Stokes' commission was to investigate charges that WPA is being used politically to help renominate Administration Senator Barkley.

Mr. Stokes reported at length. He cited and described 22 cases in which he alleged that WPA is used for political purposes.

Thereupon the head of WPA, Mr. Harry Hopkins, sent investigators of his own to Kentucky. They checked Mr. Stokes' 22 cases, reported on them, categorically and with what they alleged to be documentary evidence, some of it sworn. Their report was that in two of the cases there was justification, in 20 of the cases not. Mr. Hopkins gave out the report publicly. He disciplined the offenders in the two cases, by censure, exonerated the other 20.

So what do we have? A newspaper chain makes 22 charges. The responsible official accused, Mr. Hopkins, replies that 20 of the charges are unsupported.

So where do we go from here? Does the matter stop here—with charges made by a chain of newspapers and reply made by the accused official, the reply being based on an investigation by his own subordinates?

What could be done? There are several organizations of newspaper publishers and editors. One is called the American Society of Editors. They deal with matters affecting newspaper ethics. Ought they not give attention to this incident and make a report on the degree of right and wrong, on either side or both?

Independent Group Might Be Commissioned.

POSSIBLY the American Society of Editors would be regarded as biased. It might be said that investigation by them would be like Mr. Hopkins' investigation of himself. Would it be possible to set up an independent body, outside the two parties to this situation, outside the press and outside the Government, a body made up from other areas of life, such as educators, businessmen, lawyers?

There is a collateral matter. Critics of the newspapers say that when a newspaper makes a mistake, whether by carelessness or otherwise, other newspapers do not print accounts of the newspaper mistake to the extent that they would if an equivalent mistake were made by a lawyer, physician, clergyman or what-not. This charge is in some cases justified. But in the present case, this charge does not hold. In the present case, the original charges against WPA were printed only in the papers embraced in the Scripps-Howard chain. Mr. Hopkins' reply was printed in part or summarized by all the important newspapers I have seen. A reply to or attack on one or more newspapers by any important public official is given publicity by newspapers generally.

There is yet another point. We must not forget what gave rise to the whole incident. The public should know to what extent WPA is being used for political purposes. For this the Senate has set up a Committee on Campaign Expenditures. The members are Mr. Sheppard, of Texas; Mr. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Mr. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Mr. Harrison, of Mississippi, and Mr. White, of Maine. This group includes enough men of independence, and of diverse political views, to assure confidence in what they report.

Labor Is Urged To Continue Fight Against Pay Cuts

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor reported yesterday business prospects had taken a sudden turn for the better in the last two weeks.

At the same time it called on organized labor to continue resistance against wage reductions, saying:

"There is still the possibility some industry employing a large number of workers might cut wages and start off a series of wage cuts throughout industry. If this happens it would have so strong a deflationary effect as to offset the beginnings of improvement and start business into a further decline."

Lewis Agrees.

John L. Lewis, the A. F. L.'s rival for labor leadership, likewise reiterated opposition to wage reductions. Talking informally with newspapermen, he said:

"The C. I. O. stands with President Roosevelt in opposition to wage cuts in industry."

In its monthly business survey, the A. F. L. reported the wage level, lifted by good business conditions in the early months of 1937, had been firmly held during the 1938 decline, except in a few instances of "actual distress or among those few employers who pretend distress so as to impose unjustifiable wage reductions."

The federation cited recent business upturn, but said it was too early to tell whether the outlook was for permanent or temporary improvement.

Situation "Still Critical."

"The deep pessimism which has overcast business thinking for the past few months seems to be giving way to more hopeful and buoyant spirits," it continued.

"The situation is still critical, and it will probably be some time before the Government spending program lifts industry to definitely higher levels. Union resistance to wage cuts is especially important; union insistence on wage increases wherever industry can pay them is equally vital. This is a time for union co-operation to save costs."

The A. F. of L. estimated 11,414,000 persons were unemployed in May, or 3,500,000 more than in May, 1937.

Citing Labor Department figures showing the average wage in industry, trade and service this year had been 64 cents an hour, compared with 60 cents an hour last year, the federation estimated this 4-cent difference had added $400,000,000 to the Nation's buying power.

It contended this increase in buying power had helped to clear away the heavy inventory stocks piled up in 1937.

Cost of Idleness More Than Relief, WPA Man States

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, July 1.—John A. Kingsbury, WPA administrative assistant of Washington, D. C., said today it costs the United States more money to leave the unemployed idle than to put them to work on Federal projects.

"We have spent $14,000,000,000 in putting people to work," he said in an address prepared for a committee of the National Conference of Social Work.

"But we have lost $200,000,000,000 in not putting people to work."

The committee meeting was of a group studying inter-relations of unemployment compensation, placement and assistance, presided over by Paul Kellogg, of New York, editor of the Survey Magazine.

"In the year 1932," Kingsbury said, "no Federal funds at all were spent on putting unemployed to work. And what did we save? The national income that year, as compared with 1929, was down by $40,000,000,000."

Aubrey Williams, deputy PWA administrator, told the conference that "the principal reliance in this country for dealing with mass depression unemployment will continue to be a work program."

In a paper prepared to be read in his absence by Kingsbury, Williams summarized relief accomplishments of the Roosevelt Administration.

"Just compare . . . the situation in the present depression and the situation in 1932," Williams stated. "Do you recall how everybody was afraid of revolution—how investment counsellors advised their wealthy clients to stock up on canned goods and machine guns?

"There is none of that today. We are not afraid of revolution. The people are not afraid of the Government, and the Government is not afraid of the people."

Federal Personnel Association President E. Claude Babcock, who unloosed the "rape of the merit system" statement following a meeting of his organization Thursday night, will resume the formal and public study of the executive order in the association's offices, 908 G street, at 8 o'clock next Thursday evening. When the meeting adjourned Thursday evening, Babcock had reached Section 5 and was champing at the bit to continue the studies, but the hour grew late and the membership was tired. The first several pages, then, had convinced him that the merit system had been wronged, that "some fast balls had been thrown by the President." So what will be the findings on the wrongs to Miss Merit System when Babcock plunges into the latter parts of the orders—which, he thinks, are full of discussion possibilities? Alas for the poor maiden, alas for the batter.

We went over to the PWA employment section to see if the lines of job seekers were as long as rumored — and found the rumor correct. Chief Employer Puryear's lot is not a happy one, for they are bombing him with all the siege guns of high-powered credentials. His patience is mountain-like, his tact more than commendable. And the pretty lady in the black dress who serves as buffer somehow has a faculty of making the jobless and discouraged a little more at ease than do most women who fill such a place.

No one has had much to say about the Civil Service Commission getting a little more dough from Congress because of the increased work resulting from the executive order of June 24. The commission has been getting around $2,500,000 and it is conservatively estimated that double that sum will be needed to carry on the enlarged activity. An appropriation of $7,000,000 would come nearer permitting them to do a really first-rate job of it. But you've got to figure on the Congress. Historically, the Congress has made of the commission an undernourished child, to struggle along on begrudged crumbs.

And the Congress will soon be acquainted with the fact that the executive order will expand the Federal pay roll—this because so many emergency workers are to be brought to civil service pay. And wouldn't it be just like the Congress to take it out on the commission's hide—to say, in effect, "No greater appropriation for you, because we've got to pay so much more to employes generally." And then to leave the commission to struggle along under its greatly increased load, sadder, but no wiser about the Congress!

The President has had $3,753,000,000, allocated for relief, pump-priming, etc., and he has large discretion in allocating much of that total. Now a small allocation from all this wouldn't be a drop in the bucket. Couldn't the President set up a project under these relief funds at the commission and thereby give the commission some of the obvious assistance it needs in getting the President's own orders executed? Similar things have been done, and in this instance many people might be put to work and to the constructive end that the American people have a merit system in their Government.

Feathery Fun Makes 'Josette' Gay Diversion

Simone Simon Also Sings a Lilting Song or Two; Stage Revue a Hit.

"JOSETTE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a play by Paul Frank and George Fraser, adapted to the screen by James Edward Grant, starring Simone Simon, with Don Ameche, Robert Young, Joan Davis, Bert Lahr, Paul Gurst, William Collier, sr., Tala Birell, Lynn Bari, William Demarest, Ruth Gillette, Armand Kalis, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Maurice Cass and Lillian Porter. Directed by Allan Dwan. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Rather a tasty parfait is this "Josette." Though it gives the only Simone Simon a chance to sing, it cannot be called a musical. Still in its fluffy irresponsibility of set-up and story, it follows musical comedy pattern.

Don't take this to mean that the little Simon is any great shakes as a singer. She has a couple of very pretty songs, "Drop a Petal in Your Wine" and "In Any Language It's the Same," which she delivers in a dainty but meager soprano. This canarying is pleasant.

Mlle. Simone has definitely sharpened and smoothed her acting style—and without diluting her personality. There's not so much pouting, more of those curlycue smiles, more skill and nuance in delivery.

Also mounting at a 45-degree angle in this picture is Don Ameche. He seems even smarter, more dynamic than in other pictures—and he's never turned in a poor performance. Bert Lahr is at his funniest as a night club proprietor, but Comedienne Joan Davis misses on a cylinder or two.

Some Exciting Spots.

Spots of excitement and a certain facility of action make "Josette" a nice picture; not its story which is one of these frail things based on mistaken identity. Best of these peaks is that where Robert Young chases Simone around a boat's cabin in mimic-villain style. He's maneuvered her on his boat and has no idea of taking "No" for an answer. Number two hot spot shows Bert Lahr pouring liquor into a customer who's threatening to expose a little of Bert's phenagling. When it's all over Bert says proudly, "He's so lit you could use him to read by." For number three we'll have to nominate Don Ameche's binge, one of the best you'll ever see, especially at the moment when he indignantly says to a bystander, "You're intoxicated." It winds up with Robert Young bidding him "S'long. Happy hangover."

But these are only samples of the doings that enliven just about every other moment of "Josette." It's one of those pictures that will amuse you even if it doesn't improve you. And who wants to be improved in July?

A Bowes Revue.

A brace of acts that would grace anybody's theater are broken out in Major Bowes' "Collegiate Revue." First is that of the Three Chords, who imitate all the musical instruments you'll be able to call to mind. This doesn't sound so exciting. But it's great. The trick is both in their jittery rhythms and a delivery that suggests a violent St. Vitus dance. Another show stopper is Charlie Hogan, singing Coast Guard. But it turned out that he knew only one song. The audience could have used a dozen.

Another audience hit was a group of champion shaggers. Good, too, were the imitations of Joe Higgins and Roy Davis, though the take-off of the President was marred by obvious bad taste. Among the rest of the big gang presented by the good gray Major were novelty musicians, singers and acrobatic dancers. Outstanding was Herbert Taubler who played on sleigh bells, a pipe harp and with large coins, and vowed that he had personally made all of these gadgety instruments in his own cellar.

Emcee Ted Mack bears a strong resemblance to Buddy Rogers and swings a fair baton, but between general conversation and joke telling we did feel that we heard an awful lot of the Mack voice. Some one should tell him, too, that his jokes have been retailed around night club floor shows very considerably of late.

Erich Maria Remarque's passionate political censure of post-war Germany has become, in its screen image, a love story divorced from country and politics.

It still takes place in Germany because a character says so, but there is no feel of Germany about it. There are parties and plans and politics but they are kept, vague and unpointed, in the background. All this is too bad—it was a fine book, but it does not matter quite as much as it might, for its love story becomes in the playing a great love story and an important one. There haven't been many important love stories seen recently, s this third week on F street is quite natural and matter-of-course.

Four people, not two, make the love story what it is, for all three comrades of the title are in love with the girl and she loves all three. The girl is beautifully, movingly played by Margaret Sullavan, an actress adept at breaking your heart very simply and completely. The three comrades, Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young, are all excellent in this story of young men who went to school in the trenches, heard peace declared, but came home to find fighting in the streets, everywhere, always. Henry Hull, Lionel Atwill and Guy Kibbee give good support.

The subsidiaries include another chapter of that "Lone Ranger" serial and a new issue of "News of the Day."

Dancers Give Star Lei of Gardenias

To celebrate the start of "Honolulu," and also to thank the dancing star for her kindness during rehearsals, the chorus girls brought Eleanor Powell a real gardenia lei to wear during her hula dance.

The lei contains 450 gardenias and is 10 feet long, so that it can be wound around her body.

Juvenile Cast Stars in 'Lord Jeff,' at the Palace; 'Cocoanut Grove,' at Earle, Is Excellent Musical Bartholomew and Rooney Fight It Out in Film of British Marine.

"LORD JEFF." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Bradford Ropes, Val Burton and Endre Boehm, adapted to the screen by James Kevin McGuinness, cofeaturing Freddie Bartholomew and Mickey Rooney, with Charles Coburn, Herbert Mundin, Terry Kilburn, Gale Sondergaard, Peter Lawford, George Zucco, Matthew Boulton, John Burton, Emma Dunn, Monty Woolley, Gilbert Emery, Charles Irwin and Walter Kingsford. Directed by Sam Wood. Preciewed Tuesday, June 28. At Loew's Palace Theater.

There is nothing in America quite comparable to the background with which this picture has been supplied. It deals primarily with the operation of the Bernardo Homes in England, where orphaned boys are educated in the trades and fitted for useful and upright manhood. The particular institution against which the major part of the picture's action is laid is the Russell-Cotes Nautical Training School, devoted to instruction of dependent lads for the lower berths in the British merchant marine. It is from this environment that "Lord Jeff" derives its principal novelty and much of its freshness. The structure of the drama follows familiar patterns.

BELL.

The opening sequences of the picture are designed to make Master Freddie Bartholomew as distasteful as possible. For a time it appears as if he might really be Lord Geoffrey Braemer—a thoroughly self-centered, arrogant, detestable little snob, magnificently hated by everyone with whom he comes in contact, with the sole exception of the austere middle-aged woman who seems to be his tutor. As a matter of fact, he is merely the juvenile "front" for a pair of clever jewel thieves, who escape the consequences of one of their forays in which Geoffrey is apprehended by the law and taken before a kindly magistrate.

"Captains Courageous" Formula.

Tossed into a training school—but not a reformatory—in which are enrolled many boys of his own age, Geoffrey manifests the same despicable traits of spoiled character as marked his splendid work in "Captains Courageous." He performs his appointed tasks quite as splendidly here and leaves the Russell-Cotes School a completely reformed young man, proud to take his place as a student seaman aboard the Queen Mary.

The jewel thief nemesis bobs up again in timely fashion toward the end of the film to place strong emphasis upon the genuineness of "Lord Jeff's" reclamation from an unfortunate view of life. The intervening interval deals with his adventures and misadventures as an unwilling student of the ways of the sea. An effort to run away from the training school is thwarted by one Terry O'Mulvaney, in the robust and stubby person of Mickey Rooney, who implants his lesson in discipline with a pair of rocky young fists in the first rough and tumble fight in which Freddie ever has seemed to have a chance.

This physical prowess signalizes the emergence of Master Bartholomew from fragile immaturity into self-reliant young manhood—a trait that is reflected additionally in the considerable authority and strength of his impersonation of a stubborn youth yielding reluctantly to examples of honesty and rectitude. Like Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney himself, Freddie Bartholomew is carrying over his remarkable endowments as a juvenile actor from small boyhood into adolescence. The Rooney youngster is his own cocky self, as usual, except that in his present role he is the symbol of all that is obedient and praiseworthy in a kid who appreciates and values all that is being done for him.

There is another little fellow in the cast who takes his place on a par with his more experienced costellar associates, and that is the quaint and gently pathetic young Terry Kilburn. With a little more opportunity — and his role was padded out of all semblance to its original form as the picture progresssed—Terry would "steal" the play from his campanions.

Waves The Union Jack.

There is a deal of "flag waving" on behalf of the British navy and merchant marine in "Lord Jeff," bulwarked by fine adult performances on the part of Charles Coburn, as commandant of the school, and Herbert Mundin, cast as its chief instructor and headmaster. Both do benign and believable jobs in parts of infinite patience, understanding and sympathetic inspiration. The same is true of Emma Dunn, cast as the only woman of importance in the play, with the single exception of Gable Sondergaard, the "Doris Clandon" of the gem stealing team, of which George Zucco, as "Jim Hempstead" constitutes the other half.

The picture has been effectively produced and directed with Sam Wood's unique ability to get the most out of a practically all-boy cast of immature years. He has turned out a finished product that all young boys ought to see. It would be well, too, if they took their parents and guardians with them. It also would be advantageous if all such reformatory officials as were depicted in "Crime School" likewise might be induced to see it.

Two supplementary features on the new bill at the Palace are worthy of particular note. One is Pete Smith's "The Story of Dr. Carver," celebrating the accomplishments of one of Tuskegee's foremost scientists; the other "Tupapaoo," a picturized legend of the South Sea Isles, in which the villainous central character is played by Moroni Olsen, supported by a large cast of natives. This latter subject is a bit on the superstitious side, but melodramatic and interesting.

The new issue of the "News of the Day" further augments a program that may be heartily recommended to every member of the family.

Heart Interest in New Musical

star of the radio and screen, who adds her voice and personal attractiveness to the many other virtues of "Cocoanut Grove," in which Fred MacMurray is starred this week on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis and little Billy Lee are other important members of a long and capable cast.

Able Cast Romps Through Story of Dance Band; Vaudeville Clicks.

"COCOANUT GROVE." Paramount picturization of a story and screen play by Sy Bartlett and Olive Cooper, starring Fred MacMurray, with Harriet Hilliard, the Yacht Club Boys, Rufe Davis, Ben Blue, Eve Arden, Billy Lee, Dorothy Howe, Roy Gordon, Jimmie Conlin, Max Wagner, Clif Clark, Jack Gardner, William Davidson, Evan Brecher, Jack Pennick and scores more. Directed by Alfred Santell. Reviewed Friday afternono. At the Earle Theater.

Dance bands sometimes have a tough time getting started. When they do, the struggle for recognition may seem pretty tragic to those involved, but just how amusing, how interesting and how tuneful it all can be made is handsomely stressed in "Cocoanut Grove."

"Cocoanut Grove," after its slightly laggard opening scenes, sets and maintains a very stiff pace. Primarily a comedy—with musical interpolations—this saga of the saxaphoners has its occasional serious moments, a few that are sentimental and all in all hangs together a great deal better than many of its predecessors in the same general category.

Johnny Prentice has a pretty likely bunch of instrumentalists under his baton, but they seem to be going no place in particular—unless it is to the poorhouse—after being fired from a Lake Michigan excursion boat running out of Chicago. That is where the band would like to be running out from, but there is nothing in the exchequer that looks like money with which to pay the freight. Then along comes a likely looking young woman, under court order, to serve as instructress to "Half Pint," the very small drummer-boy ward of the insolvent leader. In a moment of inspiration she suggests to Johnny that he pull up a little on his bootstraps and get into an audition out at the Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles. It sounds like a very long walk. It would have been, if the authors of the story had not perceived in the transportation problem many of the most laughable incidents in their play.

Whipped Again.

Arrived on the West Coast, Johnny and his lads are whipsawed again. A renegade former member of the outfit has beaten them to the punch and the podium by having been mistaken for Johnny when the wrong pushbutton was pressed in the audition manager's reception room. How this difficulty is overcome comprises the source of a great deal more of the picture's fun. Master Billy Lee, as Half Pint, and Harriet Hilliard, as his tutor, are the proprietors of the film's brief intervals of sentimental seriousness.

Cocoanut Grove" is one of the few pictures of its genre that has successfully contrived to make its music and specialties an essential part of the dramatic structure of the play. It is due to this fact that the Yacht Club Boys—Adler, Kelly, Kern and Mann—not only are heard in a brace or two of their expertly lyricized songs, but play important roles in the action besides. The same is true of Rufe Davis, Ben Blue, Harriet Hilliard—who hould have been named first—and even Fred MacMurray, the star.

For the first time on the screen, to the best of my knowledge and belief, MacMurray sings in this picture. He takes a whirl at the theme song and does it extremely well. Over and above that, he is, of course, the mainspring of all the development of the plot. Miss Hilliard also sings effectively and Ben Blue and Eve Arden contribute some eccentric dances that are funny enough for all practical musical comedy purposes. Rufe Davis chips in with about what he did on the stage of the same theater, in person, last week, and little Billy Lee whangs away at the drums and traps in approved, big-time fashion and seems to be having the time of his young life in everything he does—which is a great deal for a kid of his age.

It is possible to find many similarities between "Cocoanut Grove" and other pictures of like nature that have preceded it, but I cannot recall any single production in this classification that has combined quite so many merits and so few demerits.

"July Jamboree" Scores Hit.

Something of the rollicking spirit of the picture is carried over onto the stage at the Earle this week in Harry Anger's "July Jamboree" revue. The four major acts scored heavily with the customers that packed the house yesterday afternoon.

The Sixteen Dancing Debs open the proceedings with a glittering routine and are interrupted by Max and His Gang in a novel combination of dog act and acrobatics. Max is a gymnast that has a little something on even the cagiest of his canine pals. They registered a hit of headline proportions. So, for that matter, did Lucille Johnson, with her high and clear coloratura soprano in a group of songs that once got as pretentious as an aria from "Traviata," and included also "Cosi-Cosa;" Will and Gladys Ahearn, the nominal topliners, with their intricate rope-swinging and acrobatic dancing, and the Biltmorettes, a trio of blondes extraordinarily skilled in gymnastics and unique feats in "jumping the rope." Mr. Ahearn impairs his act—or did yesterday—a trifle by obviously "stage managing" the turn from the center of the stage.

At any rate, you will find a very elegant holiday bill at the Earle this week.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 1.—There's a lull in our town now that Clark Gable and Norma Shearer have been chosen for "Gone With the Wind." We all knew Clarkie would get it, but with Norma, that's something else again. She'll act it, yes. But will she be it? I thought Scarlett was a person who acted first and thought afterward. Ever since I've known Norma, she's reversed that. She's also gotten everything she's gone after. Well, time will tell.

HEDDA HOPPER

And now Mansieur Godart, from a famous French fabric house is here trying to make a tie-up with' David Selznick—weaving scenes of our productions into their fabrics. I suppose in a year from now our smartly dressed women will be wrapped in a big wind.

Janet Gaynor, now playing a gold digger in "Young in Heart," will appear on the screen in a one-piece white bathing suit. My, my! Why not?

Not since Valentino have we had a more romantic looking star than Charles Boyer in "Algiers." And except for her dark lipstick, Hedy LaMarr is one of the most ravishing creatures I ever beheld, with a flair for wearing clothes second to none.

Sigrid Gurie, of the unusual eyes, is a bit overshadowed by these two. And if Charles Boyer really does that singing, I'd advise Walter Wanger to remake one of Chevalier's old musicals. Sight, sound and acting—Boyer's got what it takes.

A bouquet, too, for the settings. Superb!

But why, when they had Nina Kofhetz, didn't they let her sing? There's a voice any picture would be proud of. If they're looking for stories around stars' lives, they couldn't find a more colorful one than hers. She was the absolute rage of Russia when it was at the peak of its artistic glory. Rachmaninoff was her accompanist.

We'll have much more than "Lady in the News" if and when Republic makes the picture of that name, starring Gloria Swanson with Herbert Marshall playing opposite her.

Since his fling in the movies, which didn't turn out so well, Frank Shields has gone back to his old trade—insurance. He is now rated the fourth highest seller in New York City, and that in less than a year. His tennis still rates number one, as usual.

Basil Rathbone used to be that kind of a salesman before he became an actor.

All roads led to Phil Selznick's last night for Benny Fields' opening. Even the early to bed-ers broke their rule and had to be nearly driven out of the place—they just couldn't get enough of him. What a phenomenal comeback he's made, and such a charming person.

Nice to know that Gertrude Niesen is such a wow in London. All our stars, not working, ought to whip across the pond—even if they have to swim for it. Not only gives you a new lease on life, but a totally new slant on your importance. And if they'd dare go so far afield as South America, they'd find a whole new unexplored nation waiting to honor them. Try it some time and see.

The crowds at the Palomar got a double thrill for the price of one admission . . . Buddy Rogers and Mary. Mary's been going down a couple of times a week, and how the crowds adore her.

RKO-Keith's

"THE DIVORCE OF LADY X." Alexander Korda's picturization for London Films and United Artists of a play by Ian Dalrymple and Arthur Wimperis, adapted to the screen by Lajos Biro, featuring Merle Oberon and Laurence Olivier, with Binnie Barnes, Ralph Richardson, Morlon Selten, J. H. Roberts, Gertrude Musgrove and Gus McNaughton. Directed by Tim Whelan. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

The English are kidded about their static sense of humor quite often, but so far as this week's offering at Keith's is concerned, they have been kidded once too often. The English, in this Alexander Korda Technicolor production, present a fleet-footed comedy which cavorts through a high-class hotel bedroom, makes circles in a courtroom, sallies forth into a clubroom and winds up on a steamer's deck. And all with such shining bright wit and good humor that it will rank with anything of its sort which Hollywood has slapped together for the last half-year.

Lady X. is Binnie Barnes, a fascinating creature, married variously to a horse trainer, brandy salesman, wrestler and, at present, to a lord. Laurence Oliver, barrister, mistakes Merle Oberon for this incredible creature and is bent on securing her divorce so he can marry her. The lady's husband contributes a "running gag" situation which contributes much of the substance of the plot, besides having the brand of thick-skinned humor usually labeled British. Through his blundering about much of the fun is generated.

The supporting characters, leisurely drawn and given fine footage, are definitely outstanding, particularly Morton Selton, who is a grandfather such as never existed, alas, and whose pertinent philosophy ranks even higher than the ebullient frothings of Mr. Olivier in his flashy courtroom appearances.

Though the first part of the story, concerned with how a girl spends an innocent night in a man's bed, is slightly conducive to ennui, or an urge to biff Miss Oberon a light one lightly, it all evolves into excellent and sophisticated entertainment. Fun to wonder how it would have been handled in Hollywood.

Sets by Lazare Meerson are splendid, especially his contrast of primary and pastel colors. A fox hunt, seen by this limping scribe for the first time in Technicolor, is vivid as a picture book. Merle Oberon's dark red hair and stunnig costumes will cause women to rush to the nearest beauty parlor. And men will gnaw their cuticle at Laurence Oliver's perfect urbanity under conditions which would have been grounds for murder in this country.

For good will between nations, we recommend several exchanges of photoplays of the caliber of this one. It is offered you with the comment that it is quite different, and with all the exciting lure which that adjective, "different," used to have. Better leave the children home; this is strictly for adults who know the color of the cards.

Short subjects include a lame cartoon about a cat, a clipping about underseas sports, and the Pathe newsreel.

Quits Writing Book To Direct Picture

That great American novel will have to wait until Edward Cahn finishes his current directorial job.

Cahn, who for several years directed pictures after stepping from newsboy to film cutter to assistant director and then to director, quit a year ago to write a novel.

Several days ago, Cahn was called by Jack Chertok, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer shorts producer, and offered the chance to direct the latest historical mystery, "The Bravest of the Brave." Cahn couldn't resist the temptation to return to the fold.

"But I'll go back to that novel pronto," he announced.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, July 1.

ASSEMBLYMAN E. S. MORAN: A prominent lawyer, alleged to have been the go-between and pay-off man, just testified before the grand jury regarding the bribery case in which you've been indicted. Dewey granted him immunity before he testified . . . Gov. Lehman: Tommy Corcoran, representing Roosevelt, is in New York now, conferring with Farley upon the selection of the candidate to succeed you.

• • • •

SENATOR McNABOE: An attempt was made by some associates of Fritz Kuhn—head of the German-American Bund, who testified before your committee last week—to spirit him back to Germany for talking too much. Kuhn broke loose and escaped.

• • • •

IL DUCE: Perhaps you don't know it, but Secretary of War Woodring made official reply to your rebuking him for his anti-Fascist speech. His reply was in the form of a formal reception to Col. Randolfo Pacciardi, head of the Garibaldi Battalion, which licked your troops at Guadalajara.

• • • •

MEL PURVIS: Is it true that you've been doing some investigating work for Hearst? . . . Jack Benny: Victor Schertzinger, now in London filming "The Mikado," has hired an inexperienced Gilbert and Sullivan actor to portray the leading role of Nanki-Poo. The actor is Kenny Baker—the crooner who worked with you.

• • • •

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, JR.: In the Connecticut Nutmeg, you reported seeing "little Leonard Lyons, his eyes shining with news" . . . In Gotham Life, the editor indites: "My God, and what a nose for news Len Lyons has got" . . . Last night Danton Walker, the columnist, reported "Leonard Lyons, No. 1 table hopper among the columnists" . . . All you guys better get together and check on your anatomy.

• • • •

CLARE BOOTHE: In addition to Dorothy Parker—Lillian Hellman, Dashiell Hammett, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart all have refused invitations to write the movie adaptation of your play, "The Women" . . . Darryl Zanuck: The 'Frisco Fair notified your song writers, Gordon and Revel, that they had been selected for the honor of writing the official song for the fair—terms, $1,500 cash and 1 cent a copy royalties. They replied: "Never mind the honor. Our terms, as usual, are $10,000—and 6 cents a copy.

HENRY MORGENTHAU, JR.: George Abbott, the millionaire Broadway producer, appeared on the Lux radio program recently. As a result, he now says he has two things he doesn't need—a case of soap and a social security card . . . Jascha Heifetz: Goldwyn has been criticized so much for canceling "Exiles," the anti-Fascist movie in which you were to be starred, that he is reconsidering, and probably will screen it . . . American Federation of Actors: Because your strike closed the Ringling Circus, Frank Buck has organized his own Circus Workers Union and yesterday applied to William Green, head of the A. F. of L., for a charter.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA: The new air-conditioning plant at Brooklyn College hasn't proved successful, because the professors spoiled its effectiveness by opening the windows in the classroom . . . And so all the distinguished and learned professors were assembled in one room, and listened to instructions, and verbal chastisement—by the janitor!

• • • •

GROVER WHALEN: Are you planning to hire Amster Spiro, the former city editor, to become head of your world's fair publicity department? . . . Sylvia Sidney: Dudley Murphy, who will produce the movie version of "One-third of a Nation," in which you will be starred, says he'll hire his cast from the ranks of actors in Broadway shows . . . Willie and Eugene Howard: Last night your agent signed a contract for a 20-week tour of Australia. You'll sail July 26.

JOE LOUIS: "Away From It All" is being presented at the Rockridge Theater in Carmel, N. Y. George Sklar, the author, had to rewrite the entire first act. He eliminated 15 minutes of dialogue between William Harrigan, Sybil Trent and Aline McMahon, retaining only one line . . . In the original, Miss Trent was shown by the others just how Max Schmeling knocked you out. The new version, corrected, now shows how you kayoed Max.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Begs Friendship of Man Who Doesn't Love Her; He Would Break Off; She Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I met a very fine young man last fall and we dated on an average of twice a month. We always had enjoyable times and liked each other's company. One day I awakened to the realization that I loved him. Never having been in love before, it caught me off guard. My friend knows it and although he likes me and enjoys my company, he doesn't feel the same way. He is one of the finest men I know and even though I know I will never have his love, I can and will be content with friendship.

• • • •

We discussed this the other night and he feels that if we continue seeing each other, it will hurt me and he doesn't want me to be hurt. On the other hand, I would like to keep on seeing him. Perhaps I will be hurt; it doesn't matter. I can stand on my own feet and can take it, so to speak. He thinks if I don't see him any more I will be in a better frame of mind to concenerate on my other friends.

• • • •

I do have a wide circle of friends and have had several proposals of marriage. I am 22 and he is 28. Both of us are college graduates and he is practicing professionally. I would like very much to have your opinion as soon as possible. We agreed to have one more meeting and I want to show him your answer. Sincerely, X. Y. Z.

Dangers of Compromise.

Dear X. Y. Z.: It is natural for a young woman deeply in love (real or fancied) for the first time, but with her emotional nature as yet not fully awakened, to suppose that a friendly association with the man she loves, who frankly doesn't love her, is to be preferred to complete renunciation of his society. But she is reckoning without experienced understanding of the nature of love, which inexorably demands some reciprocity in a continued relationship, if it is to have other than a stultifying effect on him who loves, and a cloying or irritating effect upon him who does not.

• • • •

To enter into such a one-sided, rather hopeless compromise arrangement as you hypothesize is, in a measure, to ask for and to accept charity; and such an arrangement is calculated to do considerable injury to the spirit, the personality and the emotional vitality of him who loves without hope; who makes a thankless, an unwanted gift of his devotion. It also is, sometimes, calculated to poison the ego of the other person who is effortlessly aggrandized out of proportion to his actual merit.

• • • •

Friendship, just now, to you, seems infinitely preferable to complete renunciation of the beloved. But once the friendship was guaranteed, you would almost immediately and instinctively want more and feel starved and frustrated for lack of it. Yet you would be prohibited, by the very terms of the contract whereby you obtained friendship, from expecting or working for more; and a wretched and disintegrating inner conflict would be set in motion.

• • • •

Association with the beloved would provoke ever increasing preoccupation with his charms (and constant concomitant agonizing self-doubting concerning your own worth), and yet, instead of feeling free to give expression to such reactions, as they took deeper root and demanded fuller release, you would be confronted with the diplomatic necessity of holding them in leash. One's psychic nature is not so constituted as long and safely to stand the strain of such conflict.

• • • •

The only sane, far-sighted, mutually considerate course to pursue, in dealing with a case of unrequited love, is for the person who loves to withdraw outside the pale of the indifferent person's magnetic appeal. In so doing he is being self-respecting and self-protecting, as well as removing an unfair burden from the other person's shoulders. To love does not give one excessive claim upon another's time or conscientious consideration. It affords opportunity, merely, for the one who loves to grow—through deep inner experience—in wisdom, strength and human understanding.

What I have said above applies to the situation providing the young man never can and never will love you. But there is always the possibility (remote, however) and through continued association he might learn to love you; or, at least, become so habituated to, so dependent upon, your self-abnegating devotion that the day would come when he would suddenly discover that you were, to him, the most important person in the world; that life with you was a more securely comforting thing than life without you. There have been such instances, when a woman's patient, dogged devotion eventually won over some man's erstwhile casual indifference. I know of two—but they are the rare exception to the general rule. And when the woman does win a nominal victory by such means, it leaves her, nine times out of ten, at a lifelong disadvantage in the relationship.

In the light of my remarks pro and con concerning your problem, you will have to make your own choice of future action; but I can't see that you will be advantaged in showing this "answer" to the young man. For one thing, it agrees in the main with his belief that the greater wisdom is to terminate the relationship right now—and it is obvious that such is not your desire. And for another thing, if you should decide to adopt the strategem of doggedly wearing down his resistance, it is putting him on guard against the eventuality you would be aiming at. M. H.

A. & P. FOOD STORES

For Holiday Outings at Mountain or Shore

Play togs this season offer wide variety in styles and fabric. You can be dramatic in flowery beach shorts and headgear of printed cloque (similar to Mainbocher version at far left). The headgear is visor fronted and ties under the chin. Simplicity is the keynote of the white sharkskin pleated shorts with bright red zipper and narrow leather belt (worn by Louise Campbell, movie actress, left). For mountain climbing, Florence Rice chooses the shirtmaker trouser ensemble, below, of Italian shantung, shadow tucked and sashed with Aztec woven fringe.

Play Clothes Should Flatter, Also Give Youthful Effect

Slacks Meet Many Occasions; May Be in Silk, Cotton, Flannel or Denim; Dressy Ones Worn for Sunday Night Dining.

THE FOURTH OF JULY inaugurates the official summer play season. And whether you fare forth for this one gala day of fun or your two week's vacation later, your play togs should be appropriate and smart. Otherwise, you will act like the ostrich that buries his head in the sand instead of a gay carefree woman.

It's no longer necessary to look lost, gaminish or ill at ease in overalls or pants that big brother cast aside or lent you for the day's outing. Stream-lined slacks have been designed for all occasions. They can be long or short, in silk or denim, faded and worn or obviously new. You can go rustic in cottons or grand lady in silks and flannels.

For country estate wear, country club dining, mountain lounging or beach strolling there are trim tailored slacks in flannels, linens, silks and rayons. Light for comfort, yet heavy enough for warmth on cool days, flannel slacks are first choice for mountain wear. They come in soft, light weight gray, dusty blue or pink pin striped in white.

Dressy Slacks for Dining.

If you prefer silk slacks, you may have your choice in pale shades of lavender touched with crimson, pink, yellow, pure white, bright zinnia yellow and brown. These are dressy enough for Sunday night dining, club or home dining. Blouses, shirts, jackets, boleros or smocks accompanying these may be trimly tailored or as feminine as you please. The dressy type blouse may be tucked, ruffled or frilly.

Pure white sharkskin slacks are favorites for beach, mountain or country wear. With these blouses, boleros or jackets may be dressy or tailored, in white or contrasting colors. Jackets may be either fitted or boxy.

If you need slacks for hard wear or country romping you will find the tougher cotton materials such as linen, denim, gabardine, rustic rayon hopsacking, rayon suiting or broadcloth more practical than silk or flannel.

Three-Piece "Week-Enders."

Play suits are shown in every conceivable style and fabric for country wear. Pastel colors vie with gay, colorful prints. Cotton pique, gabardine and printed broadcloth and a variety of rayons in sugar sacking or smooth suiting weaves make two or three-piece costumes which link in some fashion, shirt, shorts and skirts. Detachable skirts which tie about the waist are worn over one-piece suits combining halter top and shorts.

Shorts are used for bicycling and tennis. The smartest versions are pleated and lengthened almost to the knees. Short pleated or gored skirt dresses are also favorites for the tennis enthusiasts.

For the girl who wants an inexpensive riding costume for ranch or farm there are blue jeans, a checked gingham shirt and a fringed suede jacket simulating those worn by the cowboys.

The simple, one-piece sports frock designed with an action back, several pockets and a skirt which permits ease in walking is still tops for golfing.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE SMART women who fool us about their age are careful to keep the slim, tapering waist of youth. They don't shed any tears over graying hair . . . they concentrate on keeping the waistline nine inches less than the bust.

Slimness at the waist is synonymous with suppleness, and you are supple only by the grace of exercise which stretches and twists the trunk muscles. Youth is slim because of its keen joy in outdoor activities. As these are given up the figure settles and you begin to show your age.

Most signs of age can be avoided, and the antidote to a matronly waistline is in a few minutes of daily suppling exercises. Some times a roll at the waist is caused by sagging muscles and is not fat at all. When this is the case two weeks' special exercise can make you slim again.

Firm Feeling in 2 Weeks.

Fat pads on the waistline are the sign that you have not exercised for a long time. The muscles have not only lost tone, but this tissue has become interlarded with fat, and more than two weeks will be required to make a perceptible difference in this measurement. That short period, however, can give you a nice, firm feeling about the waist and a good start on a slimming program. Begin with exercises like the following:

POSITION: Sitting on the floor, feet apart, elbows bent and hands clasped at the nape of the neck.

MOVEMENT: Bend first to one side and then to the other, bend forward and back as far as you can. Holding the same position, try bending and circling all the way around, first in one direction and then in the other. Repeat ten times

Now, to work on that bulge at the side of the waistline!

POSITION: Stretch up as high as possible. Holding the stretch, bend to the side, back to position, and then bend to the opposite side. Repeat the exercise ten times, pulling the body smooth and slim.

Menus Are Suggested.

Exercises of this type will keep your waistline slender and will make you feel and look younger than you are.

2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1¼ cups mineral oil

Add the salt to the egg yolks; blend thoroughly. Add the lemon juice. Then add the oil in quantities of a tablespoon or more, being sure that all the oil has completely combined with the egg yolks before more is added. Continue beating all the time with rotary beater. Toward the last, larger quantities of the oil may be added at a time. Have all ingredients cold. If a more acid dressing is desired, add more lemon juice or add the juices from sweet pickles.

Use purified mineral oil—heavy oil is best. This oil has no nutritive value and is also laxative.

Spangled Gowns.

Paris (U.P.).—For evening parties, smart Frenchwomen are indulging their luxury tastes and choosing jeweled and spangled gowns. The Countess of Jumillac will wear Mainbocher's new tinkling embroidery on a black dinner dress while Baroness Baraco-Robilant will attend more formal events in an all over beaded dress in a pattern of gay flowers.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

New York, July 1.

IT MAY BE the nickels and dimes of the millions who turn a world's fair from a red-ink headache to a symphony in black, but you must admit that such institutions do have to look out for the Bettetr People. You will be glad to know that our modest little exposition has now taken care of this vital item, and the rest of us can munch our hamburgers with an easy mind. The swells are sitting pretty.

ALICE HUGHES.

Their rallying place is called the Terrace Club—decorated in the modern style in gray, yellow and wine (color). Frank Crocker and Harold Talbot, two gentlemen who know their groceries and harmless fruit juices, presided at the opening dinner party—at which 264 gilded citizens of both sexes sat down. Grover Whalen, fair boss, sat with the two hosts, plus, of course, their respective wives. My favorite chronicler of such gold-lace things assures her readers that the unerring Mr. Crocker deftly picked the 1928 Bollinger to help the victuals down the little red lane.

Just a few of the ladies on view were Mrs. Vincent Astor, the musicians' best friend; Mrs. Tommy Hitchcock, whose husband is the 10-goal polo man; Mrs. Sonny Whitney in pale green organdie, and that will give you an idea. And everybody present got a World's Fair pin absolutely free, and then danced to the tunes of the old Washington maestro, Meyer Davis.

Yes, it was a very grand dinner in a very handsome restaurant. It assures our better element of a safe meeting-place when the hurricane strikes the Flushing Meadows next spring. Now if we can just find a 1938 model of Sally Rand, the New York World's Fair is a shoo-in—absolutely set for big money!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As I have said before, it ill behooves any male wrongdoer to trifle with our police ladies. Only the other day a dudish fellow named Lewis Herbert gave Copetie Mary Shanley a very severe shove when she hinted he was under arrest, and then began to run. His error. She caught him, and let him have a terrific thump on the skull with her handbag—behind which was a solid weight of 160 pounds. Herbert, at the station house, said he didn't feel very well, physically or spiritually. Score another for our gallant gendarmes in skirts. Don't trifle with them!

Gloria Braggiotti's wedding veil of delphinium blue looked especially lovely against her white dress, and she carried a bouquet of the same shade. We are glad for Gloria's happiness, but we lament the breaking up of our most striking team of girl-friends. His publishers threw a nice dinner for him the other day—Italian grub at Conte's.

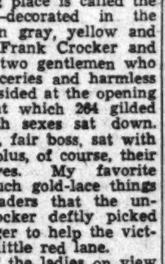
How to Buy Stockings

MRS. NASH is a woman other women talk about. "She must have money to look so well," they say. The truth is—she buys wisely. She knows which clothes will keep their looks and fit—and which won't.



Watch her choose stockings—an item that costs you or me about $26 a year.

She tests the top or welt to see if it will stretch to about 12 inches—as it should. She looks for a run stop—which checks garter runs.

Next she sees if the stockings are full-fashioned—knitted to shape. If they are, the weave runs diagonally to the fashion marks or small stitches near the seam on foot and leg. If the weave runs straight, the stockings are only stretched to shape—will bag after washing.

Other points to look for are cotton heel reinforcements—which wear better than silk, a high splice and toe block for extra strength.

Know, too, how long the leg of the stocking is. Have the sales girl measure the back of stocking from the very top of welt to bottom of heel, to be sure it corresponds in length to stockings you've found satisfactory in fit. The stocking foot should be one-half inch longer than your foot.

Should you buy "bargains?" Yes, if you know the answers to questions like these:

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay,

Apartment Neighbors.

Party Girl.

"Come on, let's throw a party!" and she may get the idea

At one in the morning.

She always has the crowd in—or at least her sweetie,

After the show for something to eat—and to drink. For the radio dances, also to tell the funniest stories.

And to shout, "You did not!" "You did, too!" "Ha! Ha! Ha!"

'Hello' Fiend.

Mrs. Clacker belongs to all the lodges and clubs in the city,

And apparently serves on all their various committees,

She reserves the early morning for gabbing with relatives

And for berating in tones that are loud and resounding

Radio Fan.

Mr. Squibb is a gentleman of casual occupation

Who being home at varying and uncertain hours,

With time on his hands,

Generously shares his very loud speaking radio

With all of his neighbors who are working or sleeping,

Or trying to think.

He sees to it that they are perpetually addressed

By stentorian speakers who are "Calling all cars,"

Dog Mamma.

She is always breaking into apartment civilization

Some baby Pekinese, bull terrier or Scottie.

Who howls all the night.

Then just as soon as he's bigger she goes off and leaves him,

For hours upon hours, so he yelps all the day

Young Blade.

Young Mr. McSapp is very ambitious socially.

He practices his tap dancing every night without fail,

When he comes home from parties.

Also to enliven the dreams of those who are sleeping

On the floor beneath him, he takes a few turns

At throwing the dice

With his roommate; then to keep his basso in trim,

He will sing ancient hymns, also something in 'hotcha'

The Debaters.

Mr. and Mrs. Jigger are a most amiable couple

Until six Sunday morning when they begin to rehash

What he did on "last night."

And to accuse and deny in tones that are raucous.

Now no one would mind, in fact all would welcome

Such drama diverting,

If it could be arranged at an hour more seasonable

When no one was sleeping and listeners were costumed

Camping Danger Is Exaggerated, Says Physician

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THAT APPENDICITIS is caused by grape seeds or fruit seeds.

This is an old one that has almost disappeared, and I suppose many people nowadays have lived to mature age without ever having heard it.

I was young and impressionable, however, at the time when appendicitis was being "discovered," which was about 1890-1895, and when the first operations were being done. At that time the idea was widely disseminated that seeds, especially grape seeds, getting into the appendix, would cause appendicitis. I remember quite vividly that for a long while I was ordered to split open the grape in my mouth and get the seeds out (which nearly spoiled my taste for grapes because it makes them bitter).

The idea is not wholly unnatural. A grape seed just about fits into the opening of the appendix and theoretically could easily bet in and cause trouble. Besides this, the contents of a diseased appendix often contain a small hard object called a fecalith, which looks a great deal like a grape seed. Appendicitis, however, is not caused by mechanical troubles, but by infection of the wall of the appendix. It is pretty hard to go through the summer without swallowing some fruit seeds and that need not disturb anyone.

Seeds Rarely Found.

The fact is that seeds in the appendix are so uncommon that the surgeon rarely finds one, and if he does, it becomes a matter of discussion in the hospital. Even so, it is impossible to be certain that the seed was responsible for the inflammation of the appendix.

That appendicitis can be cured by freezing the appendix or heating the appendix, or by oiling the appendix.

The surgeon frequently hears a patient say, "I had an attack of appendicitis once, but the doctor cured it by freezing the appendix." This, of course, means that the doctor treated it by the use of ice packs and the inflammation cleared up by itself.

Another saying is that an attack of appendicitis was cured by heating the appendix. This, of course, means that instead of an ice pack, a hot-water bag was used. They both act about the same way, contradictory as they are in temperature.

Another Superstition.

Another superstition about appendicitis, not quite as common as it used to be, is that olive oil will cure a case of appendicitis.

The basis for these beliefs is that an acute attack of appendicitis is not necessarily fatal when no operation is performed. Lots of cases get well and stay well for years. Of the three methods of treatment mentioned, the bad one is olive oil, because the way to treat an attack of acute appendicitis is by rest if surgery is not possible. Anything by mouth stirs it up.

The real danger of these superstitions lies in the fact that the patient is liable to think that his appendicitis is cured forever, just as if he were operated on, when he has been cured of an acute attack. One attack of appendicitis disposes to another, no matter what method of treatment is used, unless the appendix is removed by proper surgery.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
Society Editor

Famous Finns were guests of honor when Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja entertained at a large dinner last evening at the 1925 F Street Club. The party was arranged in compliment to Dr. Rudolph W. Holsti, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Finland, and Mme. Holsti, and other members of the official Finnish Delegation to the Delaware Tercentenary Celebration.

Fifty-four persons, arriving around 8:30 o'clock, were seated at the long u-shaped table arranged in the spacious dining room of the Curtis Club. Originally, plans had been made to have the party in the garden, but threatening clouds caused a shift of setting. The table was decorated in colors of Finland's flag—blue and white, the color scheme being carried out with silver bowls filled with white stock and blue delphinium. Receiving her guests in the drawing room of the club, the hostess was a pretty picture, her blond hair blending with her gown of jonquil net, fashioned with a bouffant skirt and trimmed with handmade flowers of the same shade.

Since members of the delegation, as well as many of the other guests and the host and hostess attended the Tercentenary Day celebration on Wednesday at Chester, Pa., table talk turned frequently to happenings in connection with the dedication of the Finnish monument in Crozer Park, where the Solicitor General, Robert H. Jackson, in behalf of President Roosevelt, accepted the magnificent monument presented to the United States by Finland.

Medals Are Very Much in Evidence

Decorations—medals, ribbons and pins—were very much in evidence. Miss Kyllikki Pohjala, member of Parliament of Finland, was decked out in no less than six medals. Mr. Hurja wore his decoration of the Order of the White Rose of Finland, which was presented to him on Wednesday, at which time Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania and Frank Worthington Melvin also were decorated by the government of Finland.

As the dinner drew to a close, toasts were very much in order. The host proposed a toast to the President of Finland. Dr. Holsti proposed one to the United States, and from then on toasts were drunk to the guests of honor, to the ladies present, and to the hostess, with a final one proposed by Dr. Holsti to Mr. Hurja, whose name, said the Finnish foreign minister, means "strong man."

After dinner, guests wandered into the garden, where coffee and liquors were served in the lantern light, and groups gathered around the tables to talk until midnight. Dr. Holsti, one of the most interesting visitors to Washington in ever so long, has an exceptionally wide range of interests. Both he and his attractive wife—a blond, petite person, who speaks English like a native and is extremely enthusiastic about America—are well informed on almost any subject you can mention. She was gowned in white and silver brocade, cut on simple lines and worn with an ermine cape. This is her second visit to America, and she expressed regret that this sojourn must be so brief.

Dr. Holsti's career as a correspondent, editor and professor, and his extensive experience as a diplomat and statesman have given him broad knowledge and understanding, both of which are leavened with an unusual sense of humor. During dinner and later he proved himself an exceptionally popular guest.

Speaker of Parliament Among the Guests

Also in the group of honor guests was Vaino P. Hakkila, speaker of the Parliament of Finland, mayor of Tampere and director of numerous co-operative societies, who speaks half a dozen languages but no English, but who always had at his elbow either the Minister of Finland or Mme. Jarnefelt to act as interpreter. Others in the Finnish delegation included Mauno Pekkala, Minister of Agriculture, member of Parliament, and director of the Central Forest of Finland; Arthur Leinonen, member of Parliament, novelist and editor of a Finnish newspaper; Victor Vesterinen, farm leader and member of Parliament; Miss Pohjala, one of the 17 women members of the Finnish Parliament; Amos V. Anderson, business leader, banker, publisher, and director of the endowed Helsinki Art Gallery, Helsinki Swedish Theater, and Abo University, and Dr. Sigfried Sirenius, church leader.

The company also included Kaarlo Kuusamo, Consul of Finland and secretary of the delegation, who was accompanied by Mme. Kuusamo; Miss Sirkka-Liisa Virtamo, widely known newspaper woman of Helsinki, and O. J. Larson, of Duluth, Minnesota, former member of Congress, who was born in Finland and who was another member of the party wearing the decoration of the Order of the White Rose.

Others on the guest list represented a cross-section of Washington society—the Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps, Congress, the residential set, and a few members of the press. In addition to the honored group, guests included the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga; the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, the latter in a print frock with red velvet accents; the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, who will leave the middle of this month for a vacation in their homeland; the Minister of Denmark and Mme Otto Wadsted; the Minister of South Africa, Ralph William Close; the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy and Mme Constantin Oumansky; the Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron and Senora de Baron.

From the Senatorial set came Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, and Miss Pauletta Guffey, sister of Senator Guffey. Others there were Dr. Stanley Hornbeck and Ralph Snowden Hill, of the State Department, also Hugh S. Cumming, jr., of the State Department, and Mrs. Cumming; Stephen B. Gibbons, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, Military Attache of the French Embassy; Dr. and Mrs. Sigurd von Numers, of the Finnish Legation and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

Also Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service commissioner; Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Catledge, Capt. A. C. Andreasen, Arthur O. Hurja, Miss Ruth Jones, Miss Flora McDonald, Miss Evelyn Gordon and Miss Katherine Brooks.

This afternoon the Finnish delegation will be guests of honor at a reception given by the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt. According to present plans they will leave Washington tonight for New York, where they will be widely feted for the next few days.

Leaves Soon For Country Home

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Lowry B. Stephenson, wife of Col. Stephenson, U. S. M. C., plans to leave early next week to spend a few days at their country home "Glendale" in Radnor, Pa. The Stephensons "commute" back and forth during the summer between their place near Philadelphia and their house here at the Navy Yard. Mrs. Stephenson also frequently visits her aunt, Miss Elizabeth Chew, whose estate, "Cliveden" is near Germantown, Pa.

Officers Feted By Charge Leao

The tea dance given yesterday afternoon by the Brazilian Charge d'Affaires, Joaquin de Sousa Leao, for the officers of the Brazilian training ship climaxed a long series of entertainments for the visiting navy men. Mme. Raul Reis, wife of Commander Reis, Naval Attache, was the only woman in the receiving line at the function at the Embassy. She wore a gown of white organdie with puffed sleeves and at her waist was a cluster of flowers trimmed with trailing blue velvet ribbons. Also receiving were Commander Washington Perry de Almeida of the Almirante Saldanha; Lieut. Comdr. Annibal de Prado Carvalho, executive officer of the ship, and Senhor Leao.

Among the guests who danced the Macheche, a Brazilian step a little quicker than the rumba, or wandered out in the garden to sit at one of the many tables covered with red checked cloths were Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen and Mrs. Boschen and their daughter, Miss Betty Boschen; Mme. Edgar Prochnik in a brown and white polka dot suit with white accessories; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Fuentes; Miss Eleanor Meem, wearing a simple black dress with a tiny black pillbox hat, trimmed with white daisies; Dr. Kurt Hetzel, Miss Peggy Wheeler, Miss Lolita Dawson, Mrs. Emory Sands, and Dr. and Senora Homero Viteri Lafronte.

John Dickinson Was Wed June 1

Mr. and Mrs. John Dickinson were making their home today at "Crosiadore," on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, following their wedding Wednesday, June 1, at Greensboro, N. C. Although both are well known in Washington official circles, news of their wedding has just become known.

Mr. Dickinson is the former Assistant Attorney General, while his bride, the former Mrs. Lula Martin McIver Scott, held a key position with the WPA here from 1933 to 1935. She was WPA regional director for women's and professional projects for New England and New York at the time of her marriage.

The ceremony took place at the home of her mother, Mrs. Charles Duncan McIver, on the campus of the Women's College at Greensboro. The bride's father, the late Dr. McIver, was founder of the college. The simple nuptials, attended only by members of the immediate families, were performed by the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Dr. Charles F. Myers. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast.

Mr. Dickinson is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Willard Dickinson, of Maryland. In Washington, he first served as Assistant Secretary of Commerce. He holds degrees from Johns Hopkins, Princeton and the Harvard University school of law.

The Dickinsons will live alternately at "Crosiadore" and Philadelphia, where he has offices.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

A GRAND EXCUSE for Washingtonians to spend a week-end in Newport will be the coming-out party there of Miss Fernanda de Mohrenschildt, Saturday, July 23, has been selected as the date of the party by Mrs. Francis Taylor, mother of Miss de Mohrenschildt and Mr. Taylor.

A granddaughter of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Fernanda is the niece of Mrs. Brice Clagett, of Landover, Md., who probably will go up to Newport with Mr. Clagett for the event. Fernanda is slim, blonde, and very pretty. She has spent little time in this country, having been educated in Europe. She was obliged to stay most of the past winter at a sanitarium in Switzerland because of an injury to her back, which prevented her from making her debut last season, as she had originally planned.

• • • •

MRS. TAYLOR'S first husband, the late Ferdinand de Mohrenschildt, died when his pretty daughter was only one day old. Mrs. Taylor is a famous beauty, who kept her figure amazingly well, and has clear cut, delicate features, bright blue eyes and snow white hair which contrasts strikingly with her youthful face. She and Fernanda have been down here several times this winter. They attended the dinner given April Fool's Day by Senator and Mrs. McAdoo and Fernanda was guest of honor at a tea given early in the winter by Mr. and Mrs. Clagett.

Sweden Real Democracy, Visitors Say

2 Women Leaders Tell of Educational and Feminine Work.

Sweden is, in the truest sense, a democratic country, according to two of the distinguished women in the Tercentenary delegation now visiting in Washington. The one, Mme. Rickard Sandler, wife of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is here with her husband, described strides in adult education among industrial workers, and the other, Dr. Hanna Rydh, wife of the Governor of Yamtland, told of progress of the woman's movement.

Mme. Sandler is president of the Workers Educational Association, which was established 25 years ago by her husband to promote educational facilities for adults. Although the project is one which serves both men and women, Mme. Sandler's primary interest is in aiding women.

"It is of greatest importance," she said, "that women in industry recognize their responsibility to educate themselves and to understand social problems. For a time the response was slow. The women may have been clever in their homes and skilled in their work, but they were lazy where study of public affairs was concerned. But, in the last five years, it has been different. They have all been eager to avail themselves of the opportunity to learn."

Eight-Hour Law Gave Time for Study

When Dr. Sandler first organized the association, 25 years ago, there was little time after the working day for study, as there was no limit on the length of the day. Then an eight-hour law was passed and educators began an intensive program for interesting workers in constructive use of leisure time.

The Riksdag appropriates a large sum each year, Mme. Sandler explained, which is allotted to cities and villages for libraries and study centers. The municipalities or groups within them must meet the Federal appropriation with a like amount for construction and equipment of buildings. There now are libraries throughout the country, established by this method, with the primary purpose of promoting adult education.

A central office in Stockholm provides courses and textbooks for from $3 to $6, she said, to be used by groups pursuing the study of any given subject. Lecturers also are supplied to discuss the topics and help adult students carry on their work. Mme. Sandler, whose subject is hygiene, frequently responds to requests to address those interested in this field.

Women's clubs, trade union leagues, temperance organizations and other societies promote the educational work and co-operate with the government in establishing the libraries. Many large business and industrial firms also contribute to the project, recognizing its importance to their employes, she said.

Just before leaving Sweden, Mme. Sandler had a meeting of her advisory committee, which included women leaders in nine different fields, to work out a program for the coming years.

Bremer Association Seeks Equal Rights

Dr. Rydh, whose husband is Governor Munck av Rosenschold, is president of the Fredrika Bremer Association, named for the first feminist of Sweden. This association, with a membership of nearly 7,000 women, worked first for the education of women, and now is working for women's rights. Dr. Rydh emphasized, as did Mme. Sandler, the desire of the leaders in such movements that opportunity be afforded to all people to attain places for themselves through education and progress. It is not welfare work, she pointed out, but an effort to provide equal opportunity for all.

Dr. Rydh, a distinguished archeologist and a member of the faculty of the University of Stockholm, is an ardent advocate of equal rights. She is of the opinion that it is most important for men and women to work side by side, and that there should be no division in their efforts for the commen good.

The organization of which she is the head has a law committee which watches legislation of interest to women. The group has recently presented a petition that women be permitted to be ordained as ministers of the Lutheran Church, which is the state church of Sweden. This is one of the fields in which there is still discrimination against the sex.

Recently the association also has been working toward the coming elections seking to put as many women as possible in official positions throughout the provinces. The elections will take place in September. Shortly before sailing for the United States Dr. Rydh presided at a mass meeting which was addressed by the Minister of State, who declared it was for the good of the country that women should serve in official capacity and have a voice in its affairs, she said.

Mme. Sandler and Dr. Rydh both will be among guests at a dinner being given this evening by the National Women's Party at Alva Belmont House.

THE first of more than 1,000 dolls to be given to children of Washington this summer, under the "doll adoption" plan of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, were presented to the children yesterday. Nearly 50 little girls gathered in the afternoon at the parish hall of St. John's Episcopal Church in Georgetown to receive their dolls. Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the council, who devised the plan, is shown in the upper picture with (left to right) Anna Marie, Agnes Adelaide and Nina Ruth O'Donald, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Donald, and their new dolls. Below is Mrs. Richard Tompkins with her little daughter, Shirley, who is cuddling her doll close in her arms.

50 Little Girls Promise to Act As 'Good Mothers' to Dolls

Effigies of Babies Most Popular With Children, Though Some Prefer Toys With Shirley Temple Curls.

Nearly 50 bright-eyed little girls yesterday afternoon assumed the responsibility of being "good mothers" to brand new dolls entrusted to their care by the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches. The group represented the first of the children to receive dolls under the "adoption" plan being carried out by Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker of the council.

They gathered at St. John's Episcopal Parish Hall in Georgetown, some coming with their mothers and others alone or with older sisters. They were little girls selected by Miss Eliza DeSaussuer, parish worker of St. John's, to receive the first of the more than 1,000 dolls collected at the recent doll teas for distribution this summer. All will be given out within the next few weeks at three "doll adoption" centers, one of which is St. John's Church. Another is Temple Baptist Church, where a second group of about 30 children received dolls last night, and the third is Mt. Carmel Baptist Church, where the first colored children will receive theirs within a few days.

At Temple Baptist 500 children and young people gather every Friday night for programs and recreation under the leadership of the Rev. Randolph Gregory and many of the Friday night attendants enjoyed seeing the delight with which the children received their dolls last evening.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council, and Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chairman of the juuvenile court department under which Miss Russell works, were both present to assist, as were many members of the committee.

The children were allowed to make a selection of the dolls they liked bset. They were of almost uniform size and most of them had been dressed in hand-made clothes by the women who donated them. Many were baby dolls and these seemed to appeal most to the children, although some selected the little girl dolls with Shirley Temple curls in preference.

There were "ohs" and "ahs" of excitement as the dolls were piled on a low table where little folk could see them. The occasion had all the elements of Christmas without the distraction of a Santa Claus. One or two of the little girls were too shy to select their own doll but hugged it tight when Miss Russell put it in their arms.

The plan is designed not only to provide playthings for the children but also to teach them lessons in being good mothers through care of their dolls. The announcements issued by the council said: "Believing play has an important part in character building and that many idle children get into difficulties, the Woman's Council has planned a doll adoption project for three centers that girls in these congested areas may come and select a doll, sign the doll code of a good mother and bring dolls back for inspection for a period of weeks before signing final adoption papers."

On the committee with Mrs. Howerton are Mrs. J. S. Davis, Mrs. M. H. Everhardy, Mrs. Dale Feaster, Mrs. K. A. Foote, Mrs. F. J. Hobbs, Mrs. R. W. Slanker, Mrs. R. A. Sauer, Mrs. Hugh Richwine, Mrs. L. M. Betts, Mrs. Mary Wingate and Mrs. Clara Sando.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Jimmy Dines Well.

Who doth with much his stomach please
Doth also set his mind at ease.
—Jimmy Skunk.

"It's a good place to keep away from," said Peter.

Jimmy has said something there. It is passing strange how much food has to do with the happiness and well-being of all the world. Reddy Fox with his stomach filled is Peter Rabbit's friend, but with it empty—well, it was for this that Peter was given his long hind feet and taught how to dodge.

Gossip is a dangerous thing, not always for the ones who indulge in it, but often for others. Peter Rabbit had gossiped with Jimmy Skunk. He had told Jimmy how Queen Bumble of the Bee folk had taken possession of an old house that had belonged to Danny Meadow Mouse and how it was now full of bees. Jimmy had suggested that Peter tell him where that nest was that he might not blunder onto it and perhaps get stung.

"It is a good place to keep away from," said Peter and told Jimmy just where it was.

"Thank you," replied Jimmy. You have done me a great favor, Peter, and I appreciate it more than you have any idea of." Jimmy was laughing inside, for he knew that Peter had no thought of what the real favor was.

Presently they separated. Peter headed for the Green Forest and Jimmy continued to poke about looking for grubs and beetles. When he was sure that Peter was not near he headed straight for the place Peter had told him to avoid. Yes, sir, he headed straight for it, and his thoughts were very pleasant ones. Peter would have been surprised could he have known what those thoughts were.

"So a lot of bees got after that long-eared busybody," said Jimmy to himself. "That being so there must be a lot of young bees in there as well. That sounds good to me. It sounds very good. There must be honey to feed them and that sounds good to me also. It is so late that by this time all the workers, the ones that chased Peter, must be back home. It is growing cool and that will help; it will cool their tempers. I won't hurry. I'll give them plenty of time to get settled for the night."

So Jimmy ambled along in his usual manner, for you know he never hurries. After he reached the neighborhood where Peter had said the nest was he had to hunt for some time to locate it. At last he found it. It was his nose that led him to it. And when he found the entrance his nose told him a great deal more. It told him that there was a feast in there for him.

Jimmy wasted no time. He tore open that nest. It was easy work for him for he had to dig only a very little way. Bees like the sunlight, not the dark. They were sluggish with the cool of the evening, and perhaps tired with the hard work of a busy day. They were confused by the darkness and the unexpectedness of the attack. And so the sharp little lances they carried were of no use to them for they did not get a chance to use them.

Grubs, workers, honey, bee-bread—all went the same way, which was down Jimmy's throat, and not one sting did he receive. It was a feast such as he had not had for some time and he made the most of it. When at last he licked his lips just one bee had escaped, and that one was Queen Bumble herself. Somehow she had become partly buried in the ruins of that nest and Jimmy had overlooked her. Her home was in ruins, but she could find another. She could still carry on and would. Had it been any one but Queen Bumble herself that was left it would have meant the end of the family. You see, only the queen lays the eggs from which a colony is built up.

It was toward morning that Jimmy again met Peter Rabbit. "Thank you, Peter. Thank you for enabling me to dine so well," said he.

Peter stared at him. "I don't know what you are talking about," said he.

"You wouldn't, but thanks just the same," said Jimmy and went on.

V. F. W. Women Mark 25 Years

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars has announced a year-long program in celebration of its twenty-fifth anniversary. The auxiliary was organized in Pittsburgh in 1914, with representatives from less than a score of V. F. W. posts. The organization now has an enrollment of 100,000 members, distributed among 2,500 auxiliary units from Maine to California.

To arrange and conduct the silver jubilee program, Laurie Shertle, of Oakland, Calif., national president, has appointed a committee of past national presidents of the Ladies Auxiliary.

The silver jubilee executive committee is composed of Mrs. Winifred D. Toussaint, Jersey City, chairman; Mrs. Bessie Hanken, of Revere, Mass., and Mrs. Ada E. Harrison, of Woodhaven, N. Y. Other past national presidents on the silver jubilee committee are Mrs. Margaret A. Armstrong, honorary chairman, of Bellevue, Pa.; Mrs. Lydia Riegel, of Tampa, Fla.; Mrs. Pearle W. Hartung, of Denver; Mrs. Lena Panzner, of Detroit; Mrs. Effie King, of Chicago; Mrs. Margaret J. Oldridge, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Florence E. Stark, of Camden, N. J.; Mrs. Dora E. Raffensperger, of Camp Hill, Pa.; Mrs. Consuelo Peart DeCoe, of Sacramento, Calif.; Mrs. Julia L. Pitcock, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Gladys Mooney, of Detroit. Mrs. Mooney was chairman of the conference on national defense, held here last fall.

Early in 1939, the Ladies Auxiliary will conduct a pilgrimage to Pittsburgh to establish a shrine in honor of the founders. Mrs. Margaret A. Armstrong, one of the organizers and first national president, resides there.

Scene of Bloody Battle 75 Years Ago

In 1863 the armies of the North and South fought one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War on this site at Gettysburg. Today, survivors from both sides, united in friendship, are holding their reunion on the same grounds. This excellent air view shows the tent city in which 2,000 veterans are housed for the reunion.

The night of the President's last radio speech his severest critic, John Hamilton, of the GOP, was dancing at the glamorous Shoreham terrace . . . He had requested Barnee, the orchestra leader, to play the Blue Danube waltz, and the tune began just as FDR's speech was about to go on the air.

A few of the Government's elevator operators are convinced that, as part of the more abundant life, Uncle Sam should install sun lamps in all Federal elevators.

"We want a little sunshine in our lives," said a girl in the Commerce Building, upon hearing that the Government plans to give away free raisins to put some iron into the unemployed . . . This whimsey may easily spread to other indoor workers.

One of the rare proofs of the unselfishness of public servants is their willingness occasionally to give up a $25,000-a-year job for a $10,000-a-year job.

This is true of both Gov. Lehman and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, to whom the glamor of the Senate appeals even at a $15,000 sacrifice in salary.

"—puppets for the masterminds?"

A little annoyance has been caused by the impression, which somehow got around, that Charlie Michelson of the Democrats and Frank Waltman of the Republicans, the rival masterminds, compose all the speeches for their parties' mouthpieces.

It just ain't so. The Hon. Bert Snell, of New York, minority leader in the House, for instance, would write his own speeches even if they had Shakespeare batting 'em out at GOP headquarters. He wrote several just before he announced his retirement from the House.

And I have a letter from the wife of another bigshot who asserts that HER husband writes his own speeches, too; she knows, because she helps him with the spelling.

Gosling, of Red Cross, Is Named Assistant Superintendent.

Plastering in old school buildings must be repaired in vacation months, the Board of Education ruled yesterday in a report on the Cardozo Senior High School accident following commencement exercises June 21.

In the report, which was submitted to the Commissioners, the board recommended that plastering adjustments and replacements should be pushed ahead of all other repairs and called attention to the fact that plaster is defective in many of the older school structures here.

Plaster Repairs First.

"One hundred thousand dollars of the appropriation for repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds became available immediately when the appropriation act for 1939 was approved April 4 this year," recalled Superintendent Frank W. Ballou, at conclusion of the report.

"The balance became available today. I shall recommend that money be made available for these urgent repairs, postponing other repairs contemplated when the estimates were made, if that is necessary."

Dr. Ballou added that he would give a complete report on repairs at Cardozo and other school buildings at a meeting of the board next September.

Dr. Gosling Appointed.

At its meeting yesterday, the board appointed Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, national director of the Junior American Red Cross, as assistant superintendent, succeeding Dr. Harvey Smith, who resigned to become superintendent of schools at Lancaster, Pa.

Mrs. Elise Watkins, for 20 years employed by the school system and secretary to Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, was named secretary of the board, succeeding Charles B. Degges, who resigned last month. Mrs. Watkins has been acting secretary of the board since Degges resigned.

Dr. Gosling has taught in summer sessions at several universities, including Johns Hopkins, the University of Chicago, New York University and the University of Wyoming.

ABC Suspends Liquor Permits Of 2 Licensees

High-pressure salesmanship on the part of a liquor salesman yesterday resulted in suspension of his firm's license for seven days and suspension of his customer's license for eight.

The retailer's suspension begins Wednesday and the wholesaler's July 20.

The Roma Wine & Liquor Co., of the 1000 block of Fifth street northwest, and Willard Hyman, 3125 Mount Pleasant street northwest, were found guilty by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of conspiring to handle the sale of 25 cases of whisky on consignment. This is a violation of the excessive credit rules under the liquor act.

Simon F. Gerber, an agent of the company, was accused by the board of inducing Hyman to take a consignment of 25 cases of liquor with the understanding he could pay after he sold the whiskey.

In ordering the suspension, the board said "sales campaigns by wholesale liquor dealers, where inducements are offered to the retailers to buy in quantities in order to receive discounts, should receive the most severe condemnations."

Licensees of the company are listed as Philip Hurwitz and Leon Samet. The board said "both are of high character and that this is the first offense which they have committed."

The board, in another action, cautioned restaurant operators who have liquor licenses, not to serve food to patrons who show signs of intoxication. The board dismissed the case involving Ludwig Mueller, of the 400 block of G street northwest.

Col. Wallace Hurt By Accidental Shot

Lieut. Col. John H. Wallace, 45, Field Artillery officer, who was graduated last week from the Army War College, was wounded seriously yesterday by a bullet from an accidentally discharged pistol while packing in San Antonio, Tex., to return here for temporary duty.

Col. Wallace, who had planned to sail for the Philippines in September, is a native of Minnesota. He was graduated from West Point in 1915 and from Oklahoma City College, Okla., five years later.

He also holds diplomas from the Command and General Staff School and both the Battery Commanders' Course and the Advanced Course at the Field Artillery School. His name is included on the General Staff Corps eligible list.

One-Man Tax Appeals Board Ready to Hear D.C. Complaints

Morgan, Sworn in Yesterday, Looks for Busy Term; Other Officials for Washington Take Oath.

The District did a lot of swearing-in yesterday, but not quite as much as Jo V. Morgan, one-man Board of Tax Appeals, who now is ready to hear from irate taxpayers.

In the first instance, there was Col. Herbert Bainbridge Hayden, newly appointed business manager of the Health Department. He was sworn in early yesterday by Arthur G. Cole, chief clerk of the department.

At the same time five physicians, all assigned to new roles at Gallinger Hospital, also were sworn in by Cole. They are Dr. John Parks, chief medical officer for the obstetrical division; Dr. Albert Sullivan, chief medical officer in the medical division; Dr. J. Ross Veal, chief medical officer in surgery; Dr. Lewis K. Sweet, chief medical officer in pediatrics, and Dr. Charles P. Cake, chief medical officer in the tuberculosis division.

Morgan also was sworn in yesterday, Adam A. Giebel, chief clerk of the Corporation Counsel's office officiating. Morgan went immediately to his office and waited for the taxpaying public to pour into his office to take advantage of the new service offered them, to wit—appeal from such tax assessments as are prescribed in the new tax law.

There were only four, three of them on the business privilege tax. But more and more will follow, assures Morgan.

Citizens who have a grievance in regard to any assessment may file a petition to be heard at no cost. They may represent themselves before the board or hire an attorney at law, a certified public accountant, or in cases of real estate assessments, a real estate broker.

Complaints arising from assessments of the personal property, inheritance, estate, business privilege, gross receipts, gross earnings, or insurance premiums tax or taxes, or penalties thereon, will be heard by Morgan — provided, however, the citizen first pays the tax together with the penalties and interest due thereon.

Miss Phyllis A. Ragusa is secretary to Morgan; Mrs. Patricia K. Schow, clerk-typist, and Miss Grayce McGraw, court stenographer. The permanent room is 213 in the District Building.

Glenn Simmon took the oath as assistant corporation counsel specializing in tax matters, left vacant when Morgan took the job on the Board of Tax Appeals. Oliver Gasch was promoted as assistant counsel, filling the position Simmon vacated as assistant to Morgan.

4 Police, 1 Colored, Retired in District; Get Traveling Bags

Swinging his nightstick gayly, J. M. Peterson, a young colored policeman patrolled his first beat in the Seventh Precinct, out in Georgetown, one warm night in 1902. For 36 years he covered that same beat. And yesterday he was retired.

He went out with three other retiring policemen from No. 7—W. D. Ballinger, A. M. Green and T. B. Scanlon.

To each Major Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, presented a traveling bag at the ceremonies attended by all the officers and men of the precinct except Scanlon who was too ill to take part.

The retiring men will spend only a part of their hard-earned leisure in traveling. Peterson will snip roses in his garden and stay at home—and the others don't expect to become exactly globe-girdlers either.

Sergt. Beverly C. Beach was presented with a fountain pen by his comrades. He is being transferred to become a night inspector.

Col. Clark, Once Of Bolling Field, Dies at Baltimore

In the Spanish-American War he served as an enlisted man, but left the Army in 1903. After nearly 15 years in civilian life, he was authorized to take the course in aviation at the Signal Corps Aviation School, Rockwell Field, Calif.

Col. Clark was commissioned in the Signal Corps in 1917 and assigned to duty at Rockwell Field as assistant to the officer in charge of flying until his transfer to March Field, Calif. There he established the course in flying instruction and made an enviable record in that 28,000 hours of instruction were given under his direction to flying cadets without a fatality.

Upon separation of the Air and Signal Corps, Col. Clark entered the former service and was on duty at Chanute Field, Ill., from 1921 until 1927, when he went to Langley Field, Va., to be post and wing operations officer, post airways office and post information officer. Later he was assigned to command of the Fifty-ninth Service Squadron, Second Bombardment Group.

Col. Clark is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lorena Clark, of Baltimore.

Trade Teacher Work Praised By Sen. Davis

The United States needs teachers who will keep pupils out of the ranks of the unemployed and the bread lines when they graduate, Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, told the Seventeenth Conference on Printing of the Graphic Arts Guild at the Washington Hotel last night.

"Education should be of the heart, the head and the hand," Davis said, as he praised teachers of trades which will afford employment to students when they leave school.

"The time is not so far distant when people entering the trades will have to have technical educations in order to receive jobs," he asserted.

Davis attacked the use of relief money for political purposes.

"Such practices lead to the destruction of individual liberty and thought, extreme partisanship and eventually national disgrace," he warned.

Presiding at the meeting, attended by the 150 delegates from various sections of the country, was Harold G. Crankshaw, president of the National Graphic Arts Education Guild. The toastmaster was J. Henry Holloway, principal of the New York School of Printing.

The needs of youth must be met in order to stabilize the economic life of America, Dr. L. H. Dennis, executive secretary of the American Vocational Association, told the delegates.

"We must be courageous and do something for youth," he said. "We must serve youth, even if it means finding different methods."

Need for skilled trades teachers in the schools was stressed by Dr. Chester Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools here.

Franklin Printers' Club of the James C. Murphy High School, Atlanta, Ga., was awarded a cup for winning the scrapbook contest of the organization.

Transit Workers Ballot Next Week On Pay Proposal

Nearly 3,000 employes of the Capital Transit Co. will vote next week on acceptance of a contract embodying a closed shop and annual wage increases estimated at a total of $112,000.

The question of a strike is not involved in the coming referendum, both union and company officials emphasized. If the men reject the company's proposals, the matter will go to an arbitration board of three members, but a favorable vote would put the new contract into effect immediately.

The contract offered by the company includes provision for a one-week vacation with pay, increase of minimum pay of shopmen to 50 cents an hour for an eight-hour day and a guarantee of $25 a week for extra men.

1,514 Criminal Cases Cleared in Six Months

Only 110 Pending as Fiscal Year Ends, for New Record.

The United States Attorney's office, under direction of David A. Pine, disposed of 1,514 criminal cases in U. S. District Court during the six months ending Thursday and established a record unequaled by any of his predecessors, a tabulation by the chief clerk disclosed yesterday.

At the close of the fiscal year only 110 cases were pending as against 629 on January 1, shortly before Pine became acting U. S. Attorney.

All important cases had been disposed and trial delays in many of the cases were due to the illness of witnesses or defendants or other causes which the U. S. Attorney's office could not control.

Credits Co-operation.

Pine credited the co-operation of justices in the criminal division and the hard work of members of his office for helping him achieve the record.

A break-down of the cases shows 14 first degree murder cases were disposed of during the half year and none was pending as of Thursday. Twenty-nine second degree murder cases were closed and four are pending. Among the latter one is a mental case, one was tried and resulted in a hung jury, and one only was indicted June 22.

A total of 284 housebreaking cases and 211 robbery cases were disposed of during the six months. Sixteen robbery cases are pending, but 12 involve the same group of defendants, one of whom is recovering from a gunshot wound. There are only five housebreaking cases pending.

182 Gambling Cases.

Gambling cases closed aggregated 182, and only eight are pending.

Eighty-three rape cases were disposed of and five are pending, of which several are to be dropped.

At the close of the fiscal year only 15 persons were in jail awaiting trial. Twenty-three were awaiting sentences, 37 were awaiting indictment, and one was awaiting action on an appeal.

When Pine took office he set as a goal the disposal of all cases within three weeks after indictments were returned.

The chief clerk reported with reference to the indictments, returned during the months of March, April, May, and June, 64 per cent were disposed of within three weeks and 73 per cent were disposed of within four weeks.

14 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 1.—The Yankees are beginning to roll. For the first time since they smothered the Giants in the 1937 World Series, the Yanks are looking like the 1-to-2 shots who are supposed to win the American League pennant.

POVICH.

They're yapping at the heels of the league-leading Indians again and tonight the American League's vital statistics show them only 2½ games off the pace. But what the league standings do not show is that the Yankees have won six straight ball games and are really going townward, as they say in the more polite circles.

It's a different kind of Yankee team, though, that is delivering for Col. Ruppert this season. It's a team that doesn't own the Yankees' traditional murderers' row. The Yanks aren't winning ball games this year because Joe DiMaggio and Lou Gehrig are knocking in great clusters of runs. DiMaggio and Gehrig are not prime assets of the Yanks this season. DiMaggio is hitting a modest .304, and Gehrig only today climbed to .290.

The Yanks are getting the pitching. That's why they're up there hounding the Indians for the league lead. And they are getting pitching from a staff that two weeks ago appeared shot. Red Ruffing alone was a consistent winner for Joe McCarthy. But in the past ten days, McCarthy has suddenly been blessed with the finest pitching in the league. That's why the Yanks are winning. Today's triumph over the Washington club did not mark alone the Yankees' sixth straight win. It marked their sixth straight game in which their starting pitcher has gone the nine-inning route. That kind of pitching is unmatched by any club in the league.

And those Yankee pitchers haven't been winning games because the Yanks have been going out and driving in runs in clusters. In those last six games, McCarthy's hurlers have allowed a total of only eight runs, or an average of only one and one-third runs per game. And the average number of hits against the Yankee pitching has been only five per game.

Five of McCarthy's pitchers have figured in the Yanks' six-game streak. Red Ruffing has contributed two of the victories and Monte Pearson, Lefty Gomez, Bump Hadley and Spud Chandler have accounted for the others. Hadley and Gomez have staged amazing comebacks.

Gomez's reversal of form has been downright sensational. He couldn't get anybody in the early weeks of the season and quickly ran up several defeats on his record. And then, suddenly, Gomez began to pitch. He lost a 1-0 game to the Browns and he lost to the Indians, 3-1. But he shut out the Athletics, 10-0. In those last three efforts, Gomez has allowed only two earned runs.

The Yanks are displaying, too, that they can take it. Yankee fortunes were never lower in recent seasons than they were a week ago today. They had just been licked three straight by the Cleveland Indians, the club that McCarthy had predicted would "choke up." Those Cleveland victories lengthened the Indians' lead to 4½ games.

If a team was disposed to quit, the Yankees would have quit on themselves after their Cleveland misadventures. But they bounced back with this six-game winning streak. The club's pitchers "arrived" in time's nick for McCarthy and set the Yankees aright.

McCarthy knows now, at least, that he can't depend on the Indians to choke up. The race looms as a battle down to the wire. But McCarthy has the comforting thought that his Yankees are rolling now despite the fact that neither DiMaggio or Gehrig have begun to hit in their accustomed style and with their accustomed vigor. If that pair does emerge from their slump . . .

DiMaggio is experiencing the first slump of his big league career. And like every other hitter, great or run of the mine, he is panicky. The smooth batting stroke that lifted him to stardom in 1936 and 1937 is lacking.

There is no doubt that DiMaggio is not the popular figure he was in his first two seasons. Yankee Stadium fans are booing him and his teammates have soured a bit on the fellow who was able to skip spring training and still sign for $25,000. It is not a happy year for DiMaggio. And with Iron Horse Gehrig showing signs of wear and tear the Yanks are lucky stiffs to be getting the kind of pitching McCarthy's staff is now providing.

Phelps Breaks Thumb In Giant Contest

Brooklyn, July 1 (AP).—Babe Phelps, the Brooklyn Dodgers' heavy hitting catcher and one of three receivers nominated for the National League team in next week's All-Star game, suffered a fractured right thumb in the fourth inning of today's game with the Giants.

A foul tip off Harry Danning's bat struck Phelps on the hand, and he left the game. The same thumb was fractured during the spring training campaign, and the veteran backstop was out of action until two weeks after the season started.

It was believed Danning would replace Phelps on the All-Star squad, for the game with the American Leaguers at Cincinnati July 6.

Dickey's Homers Defeat Nats by 8-0

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 1.—July and Bill Dickey came in like lions for the Yankees today. And the Nats? They went out like lambs.

They couldn't stir up even one run against the pitching of Spurgeon Chandler, late of Newark, and meekly accepted a string of zeros while the Yankees were winning the ball game, 8 to 0.

All that Dickey did was to hammer seven of those eight Yankee runs across the plate, and he needed only two swings to accomplish that little feat. He took one of those swings in the fourth inning and presto—the Yankees had a 3-0 lead, because Dickey's swing took the form of his thirteenth home run of the season at a time when two of his pals were on base.

Second Homer.

In the next inning, the fifth, Dickey swung again. In this instance the bases were loaded, packed, jammed, clogged and bluntly filled with Yankees. It was—you guessed it—and another home run by Dickey into the right-field bleachers, his fourteenth of the season, and the Yanks' 3-0 lead sprouted all of a sudden to 7-0.

That eighth run by the Yankees was the contribution of Frankie Crosetti in the sixth inning. Crosetti caught the motif and banged his fourth homer of the year into the leftfield seats.

But Harry Kelly had nothing to do with that home run. Elon Hogsett was in there pitching for the Nats by that time. Kelly, however, was very much involved in all those other Yankee runs for it was he who pitched those two devastating homers to Dickey.

Nats Get 6 Hits.

Thus ended Kelly's bid for a third straight victory. Today he lasted only five innings before Manager Bucky Harris found it expedient to Hogsett to take over. In those five innings, Kelley allowed the Yankees six of their ten hits and all but one of their eight runs.

As far as Chandler was concerned the Nats were indeed his little lamby pies. They only troubled him for six hits, and after the first inning they really weren't any trouble at all. In fact for a stretch of five consecutive innings from the second to the eighth, the Nats didn't even get a hit. And in the last eight innings, only one of the Washingtons was able to progress as far as second base.

It was, incidentally, the Nats third straight licking and the Yankees sixth straight triumph.

At the beginning it was all very misleading. The Nats started out as if to take charge when Case opened the game by beating out a bunt and West immediately followed with a single to right. But the threat fizzled when Lewis grounded out and Al Simmons whacked into a double play.

Simmons Makes Good Catch.

For three innings it was a scoreless duel between Kelley and Chandler. Then things began to happen in the fourth inning. The first thing that happened was a single to left by Joe DiMaggio. The next thing that happened was a double over first base by Lou Gehrig. And the next thing that happened was the first of Dickey's home run socks.

Al Simmons retired the first Yankee in the fifth by making a spectacular grab of Crosetti's line drive as it headed for home run territory, Simmons holding on to the foul line marker with one hand and reached up with his gloved paw to pull the ball down. But then Rolfe singled and the panic was on again. With one out, Kelley passed DiMaggio and Gehrig and contrived to bring Dickey to bat.

Dickey's fourth inning home run, a high fly that settled into the rightfield seats, was a bunt compared to the terrific liner he hit with the bases full in the fifth. Home run No. 2 was literally plastered and the Yanks found themselves in a 7-0 lead. After that nothing was important.

Mike Lynch Enters Marathon Race

Mike Lynch, the veteran District distance runner, is expected to celebrate his fifty-sixth birthday on Monday by participating in the eleventh annual July Fourth marathon here, sponsored by the department of playgrounds and the Takoma Park Citizens. The grind is over a 10-mile course, starting from a point below the railroad bridge on Mount Vernon Boulevard to Takoma Playground, Fourth and Van Buren streets northwest.

Lynch, who was the first District entrant to finish six years ago on his fiftieth birthday, has been prepping himself for the race with some rather stiff workouts for one of his age. He expects to face Capt. Patrick Carroll's starting gun, though it is doubtful he will finish.

Seeds Hero, Giants Top Dodgers, 3-1

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 1.—Bob Seeds, fresh up from the International League, clouted a homer with two mates aboard in the fifth inning today to give the New York Giants a 3-to-1 victory over their old enemies, the Dodgers.

The victory, strengthening the Giants' hold on their four-game National League lead, stretched their winning streak to five straight. It was the seventh in a row for Bill Terry's terriers over the Dodgers this season. The Brooklyns have yet to beat the Giants in 1938.

Both teams collected eight hits, Harry Gumbert giving up that many in winning his seventh victory of the year against five defeats, and the Giants tagging Luke Hamlin and Tot Pressnell for the same amount.

Despite Seeds' homer, all the Giant runs were unearned. An error by the usually reliable lippy Leo Durocher set up the Giants' scoring rally after which Seeds, with two out, connected with Hamlin's three-and-one pitch and drove it against the rail atop the leftfield stands It was his second homer since the Giants bought him from Newark recently.

For the Dodgers, the game became a double loss. Babe Phelps, their hard-hitting catcher and nominee to the National League all-star squad in next week's midsummer classic, fractured his right thumb in trying to handle a foul tip, and may be side-lined for six weeks.

Shute Leads Guldahl In 'Dream Match'

Newton, Mass., July 1 (AP).—A two-under-par round of 71 on Brae Burn, his home course, early tonight gave Denny Shute, two-in-row Professional Golfers champion, a three-hole lead over Ralph Guldahl, the repeating National Open titlist, when they completed the first half of their 36-hole "dream" match.

Those two brilliant stars will resume their challenge competition tomorrow on the neutral South Shore course in Hingham.

John Burke Wins; Seeks Title Today

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., July 1.—Survivors of sensational skirmishes in a downpour of rain, sophomores Bert McDowell, of Louisiana State University, and John P. Burke, of Georgetown University, advanced today by the narrowest of margins to the finals of the National Intercollegiate Golf Championship.

The 19-year-old McDowell, resident of Kansas City, and Burke, 21-year-old delegate from Newport, R. I., square off for the championship over the 36-hole route tomorrow on the Louisville Country Club course.

After stepping out to a commanding lead of 6-up and leading by four holes turning into the stretch nine, Burke barely withstood a spectacular challenge from young Bob Babbish, of the University of Detroit, before triumphing, 1-up, on the thirty-sixth.

McDowell and Lew Oehmig, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the University of Virginia, waged a thrilling duel, never more than two holes separating them, but the Louisiana State youngster staged a remarkable comeback to square the match at the thirty-sixth hole and then nonchalantly walk up and run down an 18-foot putt to win, 1 up, on the thirty-seventh green.

The McDowell-Oehmig duel was a spectacular scoring affair, with the winner reeling off the 37 holes one under par despite the sloppy going, and Oehmig equaling the course's par figures for the distance. What McDowell lacked in chipping he made up with his trusty putter. One of his great putts was a 5-footer at the thirty-seventh hole, where a miss would have given the match to Oehmig.

Burke and Babbish did not score well. Burke, after equaling par of 71 for the first 18 holes to gain his 6-up margin, skyrocketed to an afternoon 80 as the rain fell harder. Babbish had rounds of 79 and 78, and despite the handicap of being so far down, finished sensationally and had not the holes run out, might have overtaken Burke.

Heavyweight Match Fades

Louis Tired; Schmeling Ready to Sail.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 1.—Prospects of a September heavyweight championship fight between Joe Louis and Max Baer faded into the realm of improbability today as the champion and Promoter Mike Jacobs indicated they were not overly anxious to have the match this year.

In Chicago, Julian Black, co-manager of the Brown Bomber, said Louis was a bit worn out and reluctant to meet Baer in September. In New York, Promoter Mike Jacobs said he was "open minded" on the subject of a Baer-Louis match this fall.

"We have worked Joe quite hard this year—three heavyweight defenses," said Jacobs, "and I don't blame him for not wanting to fight again in September. However, after he gets a month's rest, he may be anxious to fight again. We'll see what happens. Until then, we'll consider the fight on, tentatively."

Ring experts around New York's cauliflower row almost unanimously believe Louis will not risk his title until 1939. Joe has made plenty of money this year with his three title defenses and, should he meet Baer this fall, he would be forced to turn over a good share of his purse to the Government for taxes.

Max, though he is reported to have promised his wife he would quit the ring, today insisted he was not through. He said he hoped and was confident of getting a third and rubber match with Louis. Promoter Jacobs, however, turned a cold shoulder on his plea, suggesting Max might meet Tommy Farr, the Tonypandy Welshman, sometime next fall.

Should Baer run into a defeat before he meets Louis, it is quite certain Jacobs will match Gunnar Barlund, the durable Finn, against Louis for the title next summer. Barlund, after an illness, has shown quite well on his comeback and Jacobs thinks he would be a natural.

Phils Down Bees Twice

Win by 4-1, 5-0; Reis Wildness Is Costly.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 1.—Holding the Bees scoreless except for pinch-hitter Harl Maggert's homer, Philadelphia copped a double-header from the Boston Nationals today, 4-1 and 5-0.

Maggert's four-base blow in the eighth inning of the first game put the Bees on an even footing with the Phillies until Relief Pitcher Bobbie Ries gave four bases on balls in the last of the ninth. His wildness forced in one run and a single by Hershel Martin scored two runs more before the game ended.

"Lefty" Wayne Lamaster starred on the mound and at bat for the Phillies in the second game, in which the Bees didn't get a man to third base.

Lamaster held the Bees to five hits, as did Claude Passeau in the first game, and then drove in three runs.

Phils and Macks Play at Shibe Park

Philadelphia, July 1 (AP).—The Philadelphia National League grounds, at whose home plate have stood all the great players of the senior circuit in the last 51 years, was abandoned by the Phils today in favor of Shibe Park, the home of the American League Athletics.

For years it has been proposed that the two teams play on one ground, and the dream came true today when Gerald P. Nugent, president of the Phillies, and Connie Mack, president of the A's signed an agreement for the Nationals to share Shibe Park.

The National grounds are owned by the Charles W. Murphy estate, of Chicago, and the transfer to Shibe Park could not be made until an agreement was reached with the heirs of the estate, because the Phils held a long term lease on the grounds.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

To Case, three points, because he made two of the Nats six hits, one a perfect bunt at the start of the game, and the other an infield single to Crosetti that Case's speed enabled him to beat out.

To Sammy West, two points, because he contributed what appeared to be an important single in the first inning and because he played a brilliant game in the field.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he authored one of the Nats hits and gave both Kelly and Hogsett superb support.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he contributed one of the Nats hits and failed to get more only because he was the victim of sensational fielding plays.

To Cecil Travis, one point, because his single in the ninth was a dying effort on the part of the Nats to avert a shutout.

Mrs. Moody, Miss Jacobs Clash Today

U. S. Choice to Win Five Crowns; Budge Scores, 6–1, 6–0 and 6–3.

By Scotty Reston.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Wimbledon, England, July 1.—Don Budge, working his monotonous miracles with incredible ease, played phenomenal tennis for 22 minutes on Wimbledon's center court today and thrashed Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin in the men's singles final of the All-England championships, 6—1, 6—0, 6—3.

In these 22 minutes, before a hushed and strangely baffled capacity crowd, Budge won 14 consecutive games. After that he just toyed with the "mechanical rabbit" until the end.

Queen Mother Mary and the Duke and Duchess of Kent were in the crowd that saw Budge become the first foreigner since 1921 to defend the Wimbledon title successfully.

With one title thus secure, the United States has the two finalists in the women's championship, Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, and seven of the 12 players left in the three doubles finals tomorrow.

Mrs. Moody Choice.

Mrs. Moody still is a 5-to-4 favorite to beat Miss Jacobs. Budge and Gene Mako and Budge and Alice Marble are favored to retain their men's doubles and mixed doubles crowns, and Miss Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan to win the women's doubles. If all the favorites prevail, it will be the first time in the history of the tournament that all five titles have been taken by one country.

After the first ten minutes, the Budge-Austin match had all the elements of an exhibition.

Unlike his 1932 final against Ellsworth Vines, Austin was not awed by the speed of Budge's service. In fact, it was against this service in the first game that he looked, for a brief instant, like a potential giant-killer.

Budge won the first two points with a terrific service, a kangaroo leap to the net and a smash. But he was left stranded at that net by three glorious passing shots on the next three points, and the crowd moved up to the edge of their seats.

This sort of thing went back and forth, with both storming the net, and the game went to deuce four times before Budge finally put it away. Austin followed this with a love game on his own service and the struggle lasted for just one more game.

Then started Budge's string of 14 straight. The Californian said later that he never remembered having played such perfect "forcing tennis." For these 22 minutes, bounding forward after every scorcher and anticipating every cunning move Bunny made, he was simply terrific.

From the second game of the first set until the fourth of the third Bunny did nothing but run and wheeze and sigh and swing. The rallies never lasted long. They lasted, indeed, only until Budge decided he had hit one good enough to follow to the net.

When he followed it the rally suddenly ended, for he volleyed at the net with such deadly accuracy that Austin in one game actually threw his racquet across the court at a disappearing shot.

Rain Halts Play.

When Austin took the fourth game of the final set and followed it by winning the fifth, rain began to fall. They played through the seventh and retired from the court with Budge leading, 4-3. Then—when the rain came down harder than ever—they reappeared and finished off the match in eight minutes.

Mrs. Moody and Miss Jacobs, rivals in tomorrow's return "battle of the century," had no doubles engagements today and therefore restricted their activities to practice. Helen the first woked out with Dan Maskell, the club professional, at Wimbledon, and Miss Jacobs with Bill Tilden at the Queens Club.

First event on the closing program will be the women's doubles final, with Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan meeting the defending champions, Mme. Rene Mathieu of France and Adeline (Billy) Yorke of England. The American girls today defeated the South American duo of Mrs. Bobbie Heine-Miller and Margaret Morphew, 7-5, 6-4, while Mme. Mathieu and her partner eliminated Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of New York and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin of France, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

After the Moody-Jacobs duel, Budge and Mako will take the court against the new German Davis Cup combination of Henner Henkel and Georg von Metaxa, who reached the title round with a 7-5, 6-2 6-4 conquest of Franz Kukuljevic and Josip Pallada of Yugoslavia.

The final match of the day will send Budge and Miss Marble out after their second mixed doubles triumph against Henkel and Mrs. Fabyan. The defending champions today whipped Ronald Shayes and Joan Saunders of England, 6-4, 6-2, while Henkel and Mrs. Fabyan turned back Alejod Russell of the Argentine and Freda James of England, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3.

Budge Blushes When He Meets the Queen

Wimbledon, England, July 1 (AP).—Queen Mary asked to see Don Budge and Bunny Austin after Budge had beaten the Briton in straight sets for the Wimbledon Championship today.

"She's a kind and wonderful lady," said Budge later.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

The Golden Era of Sports—that sensational stretch from 1920 to 1930—still glitters with the memories of such famous figures as Earl Sande, Babe Ruth, Paavo Nurmi, Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills, Glenna Collett and Joyce Wethered, Gene Sarazen, Hagen and Bob Jones, Man o' War, Red Grange, Johnny Weissmuller and Gertrude Ederle, Tommy Hitchcock, Dev Milburn and a dozen others who wrote their histories indelibly into the march of time.

VIDMER.

But the sphere of sports isn't doing so badly these days either, when you come to think about it, and seldom has half a year produced a more glamorous array of performers or a greater number of sensations than the six months from January through June.

There was, as a fair enough starter, a miler by the name of Glenn Cunningham. He doesn't belong to this year alone, for he has been campaigning and hanging up records for several seasons, both on the boards and cinders. But the greatest mile he ever ran does belong to this span of six months.

* * * *

Others since Nurmi's time had broken the mile record, including Gene Venzke, Jack Lovelock, Sydney Wooderson and Cunningham, himself, but they were shaving tenths of a second off the time. Cunningham, running indoors in a paced race, under ideal conditions knocked two full seconds off the time for the fastest previous mile, completing the distance in 4:04.2 where Wooderson's outdoor 4:06.4 was the fastest ever clocked before.

This may be the answer to whether or not a four-minute mile ever will be accomplished. Perhaps Cunningham's time never will be bettered. It may have been the maximum effort, but in any case it will do until a better miler comes along and, at least, it compares rather favorably with anything the golden era could produce in the way of distance runners.

Successor to the Emperor.

So far no one has come across the golfing horizon to eclipse the deeds of Bob (The Emperor) Jones, or Hagen or Sarazen, either, for that matter, but in the last six months a pretender to the throne has plunged into prominence. His name is Ralph Guldahl, of course, and when he won his second successive National Open championship, not to mention the fact that he followed this up with an overwhelming victory in the Western Open, at least he appeared headed for the heights of his predecessors.

Few men have won the National Open twice in succession. Indeed few have won it twice. And Guldahl's string is still unbroken. He is still on his way to a new achievement—winning the Open three times in a row. And if he can do that, he will stand on a pedestal beside the greatest golfers that the golden era could produce.

It doesn't seem likely that he will repeat, and yet it isn't entirely without the realm of possibilities. Why not? He has all the shots, the stamina and the strength. And chiefly he has the temperament. When he goes into the Open at Philadelphia next year, he won't be carrying the mental load of knowing that he is after his third successive title. It will be an entirely new, and separate and distinct tournament as far as he is concerned, just as each shot he makes is not a part of the whole, but something complete in itself.

Horton Smith, I think it was, pointed out the secret of Guldahl's string of successes. "I never saw a player concentrate so hard on each single shot," the blond boy from Missouri observed. "Where others are thinking what they will do after they hit the green, Ralph thinks only of hitting it."

Dark and Dangerous.

The Golden Era had Jack Dempsey, one of the greatest fighters of them all, and Gene Tunney, the master of the science of boxing. But in the foreground of the present pugilistic picture stands Joe Louis, a great fighter and a great boxer, too. And he silenced all doubts of his greatness in the span of the past six months.

There were some who pointed to his single defeat two years ago and shook their heads when his name was mentioned in the same breath with the ring's royal warriors. He had been beaten by Max Schmeling and they refused to overlook that fight, although Dempsey had been beaten more than once and so had Tunney before either rose to the championships they held.

But there was something stunningly convincing about Louis' victory over Schmeling when they met again, and even the most skeptical seem silenced, tactitly admitting that Louis belongs with the best.

Other Entries.

And the short span of six months which has elapsed since the turn of the year has produced several other sensations. A young recruit left-hander by the name of Johnny Vander Meer, for one. He came out of the shadows by pitching a no-hit game and he stepped directly into the spotlight by repeating the performance the next time he started. The Golden Era had its Ruth and Gehrig, but Vander Meer will do for a baseball hero for the moment.

And there was another young fellow who caught the fancy of the fans, a blond, grinning young fellow with a Southern accent named Charlie Yates, who went across the Atlantic and came back with the British Amateur championship.

* * * *

And just the other day one of the most gallant crews of rowing history scored a sensational triumph on the turbulent waters of the Hudson, when the Navy shoved its shell in front of California and Washington simply because it refused to be beaten.

Reid, Scalzo Or Belloise May Be Foe

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn peered cautiously out from behind a row of empty Anacin bottles, unreceipted bills, hat boxes and tie racks yesterday, made certain no alien agents were hoyering near, and in a tone that hardly could be heard in the next block whispered:

ARCHIBALD.

"Pssst. C'mere. I've got the best news of the year!"

We inched over toward the little cubby hole that is his boxing business office. The boys fondly refer to it as the Twenty Cents Sporting Club, because Goldie invariably discusses terms in thousands of dollars, then asks for a nickel to make a phone call.

"I've got the biggest news since 'Evil Eye' Finkel refused a free steak," he repeated. I've just signed Joey Archibald to box here July 11. How's that for a match?"

"Isn't that only half a match?" we suggested. "And do you think it's safe putting him in there with one of those Civil War veterans?"

"Boy, Am I Looking!"

"Well, I'm trying to get somebody for him, but don't worry, it won't be any setup. I don't go for that sort of stuff. He's gonna fight a real, live man—no stiff. Somebody like Leo Rodak, or Pete Scalzo, or Al Reid, or Mike Belloise or Tony Dupre. If I can get any one of them I've got a match even the President will come see—maybe."

"No, no, you're wrong about that," Ahearn protested. "You're wrong about that. Weill ain't dictating to me. I'm making the matches here, and I don't stand for any of that choosing business. Of course he isn't gonna take just anybody—not unless he gets a big guarantee. We can't pay him $10,000 or even half that for a match, but there's still a lot of good matches we can make on a percentage basis. He hasn't said he won't take any of those boys I just mentioned, and I know I'm gonna get one who'll make a real fight of it.

"Don't Be Surprized!"

"Confidentially," he continued, bending close to the ear to get beyond range of a suspicious looking gray hat, "I wouldn't be surprised if the boy I get knocks his ears off."

"Well, we will be surprised if the boy you get knocks his ears off, or even gets close to him—if Mr. Al Weill has anything to do with it. Weill isn't going to let you borrow his fighter for a night to have him knocked out, or even mussed up a bit—unless Al's got religion."

"Well, either Mr. Archibald fights a real fighter or he don't come in here again," bellowed the matchmaker, slamming a fat palm down on the cash register. "I ain't gonna stand for him picking spots. What's he think I am, a good time Charley—a sap?"

"My friend you uttered something that time."

Here's "The Finger."

Herman (The Finger) Kerbel, was under it.

"What are you doing here?" snorted Mr. Ahearn in an angry tone. "What are you hiding under my hats for, spying on me, or something?"

"Can't a guy stand around with a hat on without you accusing him of being a 'spy?'" demanded The Finger in a very hurt tone.

"Tell you what," we suggested. "Why not match Herman with Archibold? He'd give him a better fight than some of those others."

"Who, me fight him?" asked Herman, no little disturbed by the thought. "Listen, the only guy he ever beat is Lou Gevinson. Let him get himself a reputation, then I'll take him—in a 50-yard foot race!"

Welsh and Lynch Enter Finals Of District Net Championship

Welsh Wins Over Tony Latona and Lynch Defeats Dooley Mitchell to Advance in Tourney.

By Jack Munhall.

Overpowering strong opposition at the Columbia Country Club with a display of their finest tennis of the season, Barney Welsh, defending champion, and Hugh Lynch, the third-seeded contender, both of Edgemoor Club, yesterday won their way into the finals of the District of Columbia tennis championships for the second straight year.

Welsh, winner of the city's tennis plum for four consecutive years, swept Tony Latona off the court in a morning match by the decisive scores of 6—3, 6—1 while Lynch, recent victor in the City of Washington tourney outlasted Dooley Mitchell in the afternoon in three thrilling sets, 6—2, 7—9, 6—3.

These players, rivals for long years during which Lynch has never beaten the perennial District champion, meet this afternoon at 2:30 to open a program which includes two other highly attractive matches.

Immediately following the singles tilt, Welsh and Mitchell, defending doubles champions, play one semifinal match with the dangerous Buddy Adair and "Baron" Bill Breese, and Lieuts. James Farrin and Bill Howard encounter Lynch and young Davie Johnson in another.

A large, rain-swept gallery missed the Welsh-Latona setto, which was run off some five hours ahead of schedule, but was rewarded by witnessing one of the finest matches ever staged at the club when Mitchell and Lynch stepped on the soggy court to battle through rain and wind in two hours of superlative, dramatic play.

The first set, taken easily by Lynch, seemed to bear out predictions that the poorly conditioned and aging Mitchell would be bombarded off the courts by the trim Lynch, who has recently been playing his best tennis in years.

But with a one-set lead and a 5-2 advantage in the second, Lynch again was the goat of a Mitchell comeback, which switched the stage back to the finals of the Hearst tournament last year when Dooley, trailing by two sets, five games to two in the second and 4—15 in the eighth game, somehow came back to win the match in what was termed a "miraculous finish."

That same finish, though imminent yesterday, was forestalled by a different, vastly improved Lynch, who refused to lose heart when Mitchell swung the tide in the second set, won it and appeared the ultimate winner.

And in the clinching set he turned on the heat and pushed his tiring foe relentlessly to gain a well-deserved victory. Mitchell, his last ounce of strength and drive spent by his pressing efforts in the preceding set, had nothing left.

That second set, however, proved once again that the pudgy accountancy professor is the city's top "money player." Taking a firmer grip on his racquet even as the spectators were leaving the scene content in the feeling that Lynch was not to be denied, Mitchell opened up with a barrage of cleverly placed drop shots which completely befuddled Lynch and quickly changed the set from a one-sided affair to a see-saw, thrilling exhibition of magnificent recoveries and searing placements.

Playing almost exclusively to Lynch's weak backhand, Dooley held his serve in the eighth game, reducing the lead to 5—3, and then cracked Lynch's serve in the crucial ninth game to pull to 5—4. His confidence bolstered by a chance to square the set on his own serve, Mitchell continued his drive to capture both the tenth and eleventh games to lead for the first time at 6—5.

Lynch crept back into the van at 7—6, but Dooley held his own service in the fifteenth and broke Lynch's in the sixteenth to close out.

The clinching set, as said, was all Lynch. Welsh, his booming serves and crisp forehand smashes functioning to perfection, had little trouble with Latona, the playgrounds instructor, although the games in the first set were unusually close.

Yale Crew Meets Kent

Race Set Today; Burk Wins Over Tyler.

By the Associated Press.

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 1.—United States oarsmen today were assured a bid for both the Thames Challenge Cup and the Diamond Sculls in the Royal Henley Regatta as two American eights reached the semifinals of the former competition and United States Champion Joe Burk, of Philadelphia, reached the final round for the Sculling Trophy.

It will be Yank against Yank on the Thames tomorrow morning, when Yale's 150-pound crew races Kent School, of Connecticut, to decide which will represent the United States in the Thames Cup finals. In the other semifinal, London's Rowing Club will meet the Excelsior Club, of Eton.

Yale won its third-round race today with a well-paced victory over Imperial College, finishing a length in front and covering the mile and five-sixteenths in 7 minutes 10 seconds. Kent, meanwhile, was forced to extend itself to beat St. John's College, of Oxford, by a length in 7:29.

Burk carried the American flag into the Sculls final with an easy five-length triumph over T. H. Tyler, of the Thames Rowing Club. Clocked in 9 minutes flat, Burk let the Englishman set the pace.

Capital Club Selected for Golf Trials

National Amateur Qualifying Rounds Set Here on August 30.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Sectional qualifying rounds for District and Maryland golfers seeking places for the National Amateur championship in Pittsburgh, September 10 to 16, will be held over the Congressional Country Club course on Tuesday, August 30, over the customary 36-hole route, it was announced yesterday by the United States Golf Association.

Congressional is one of the 33 districts scattered throughout the country, with one in Hawaii. The number is one more than the previous high of 32 that qualified for the '36 event at Garden City, Long Island. The event over the Oakmont course, scene of the 1935 National Open and last year's Intercollegiates, will be the eighth involving sectional qualifying rounds.

Entries for the Amateur championship close August 12, on forms issued by the U. S. G. A., in the association office, 73 East Fifty-seventh street, New York. Players must have club handicaps of four and under.

The Congressional course will be open for practice rounds for out of town contestants August 25, 26, 28 and 29, and to local players on August 25, 26 and 29.

Louisville and Memphis will hold sectional trials for the first time, while Indianapolis, New Orleans, Troy (N. Y.) and Richmond will be revived as points after several years' lapse. Four districts on the 1937 schedule, including Portland, Oreg., will not be used.

Last year the District-Maryland entrants qualified over the Five Farms course in Baltimore. The shift to a Washington course is one of eight that include moving the trials from Rochester to Buffalo, West Orange to Garden City, Asheville to Greensboro, Akron to Cleveland, Oklahoma City to Tulsa, Boston to Providence, and Madison to Milwaukee.

Entrants in the National Public Links Championship will not be eligible for the National Amateur. No player can compete in both events.

Approximately 170 players will be eligible for the championship proper, including the exemptions, Charlie Yates, British Amateur champion, all former U. S. G. A. champions, who still retain their amateur status, and acceptable foreign amateurs.

The local entrants are expected to near the 100 mark, thus giving the field at Congressional some 10 or 12 places to shoot for in the championship proper.

Last year Levi Yoder won the gold medal awarded to the low scorer in the sectional qualifying rounds, while Billy Shea, who qualified at Portland and went to the second round. Martin McCarthy and Jack Fulton won the other local places.

Qualifying points surrounding the Middle Atlantic section, in addition to the include Guyan Country Club, Huntington, Country Club of Virginia, at Richmond, W. Va.; Sedgefield C. C., Greensboro, N. C.; Manufacturers Golf and Country Club, Oreland, Pa., near Philadelphia, and Allegheny Country Club, Sewickley, Pa., near the host city, Pittsburgh.

Ferrell and Pearson Will Pitch Today

New York, July 1.—Yankee Stadium today qualified along with Fenway Park as a jinx ball field for the Nats. They have been unable to win a game in either park this season in a total of nine attempts.

Tomorrow, Manager Bucky Harris will attempt to get an even break in the two-game series here by sending Wes Ferell to the mound. Monte Pearson will pitch for the Yankees.

Doreen Wins Dr. J. L. Luke Purse at Charles Town, Pays $10 Mutuel

At The Post

With Bill Bennings

Selections at Charles Town.
Dear Al:

Race Secretary Freddie Burton has lined up a good week-end program for this track, with the Senator Milton R. Rouss Memorial Handicap, the day's feature event. Seven of the better six furlong horses on the grounds have been named, including a full list of winners over the track. Royal Business, Sylvia G., and Eblis are expected to draw the chief backing. Weights have been distributed in a manner that points to a keen stretch battle. S. B. Webb, who sold Apprentice Jockey Beverly Hacker's contract, has left for Kentucky to purchase horses and to seek an apprentice to take Hacker's place. Webb will return to racing hereabouts at Belair. For once, the press agent's "All stalls are filled" is right as far as Hagerstown is concerned. Harold Bestor, of that track, had to turn down friends who filed applications too late. Hagerstown opens July 12. Willie Obert, whose age has been guessed from 42 to 56, is thinking about retiring from the saddle. He will become a jockey's agent if he stops riding. Pete Cross has sold Big Toney to L. R. Stockdale. W. B. Schlausser has purchased Apathy and Running Water from J. H. Elliott. Former Jockey L. Coffman is branching out as a trainer. He used to ride Moonside on the big tracks. And here's the winners. BILL.

First race—Feather Tread galloped home in front of somewhat similar company at this track. Seems best and should take it all. Asterisk has been fairly consistent and looms as the one to beat. Prince Jock might take it all if taken off the reserve list.

Second race — Magic Line and Maxie Binder, both winners at the other meeting, are a close fit in this field. Your guess is as good as mine. I'm going to take them in the order named. Canson's last can be tossed out.

Third race—Zippy, first on the also eligible list, is fairly certain to get a place at the post in this event. I'm going to string along. Memena was second in a recent test and is dangerous. Corn Row has worked well and is a possible surprise.

Fourth race—Indiana, another first on the also eligible list, may shift to Jockey Berg in this race. Has shown enough to take down first money. Justa Jimmie and Hagerstown Boy to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Cats Cradle gets in this with light weight and is fit as hands make horses. I forecast a set of brackets for this one. Scout Allow should go well. Radial went well in a short sprint last Thursday and could upset the talent.

Sixth race—Royal Business found the route too long last out. Goes at the distance he prefers and should take the chief end of the cash. Sylvia G. has been hiding in the recent races and is much better than generally rated. Eblis is as good as that recent victory.

Seventh race—Petee Lad has been playing around and showed me enough in that last race to warrant a selection in this field. Seems outclassed a bit on the cold dope but we shall see what we shall see. Jimmy D., breaking from the inside, will be a threat. Little Percy would have a chance with a change of riders.

Eight race—Baku was given a warmup for a distance race last out and this looks like the spot. Itsamaid needed that last and is dangerous. Seaboy has so much closing ability that he might be a factor. Cartour moves up in mud.

Xmas Carol Loses Race By a Nose

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1.—Doreen, a 5-year-old daughter of Wrack, stretched her nose in front of Xmas Carol, a 3-year-old daughter of High Strung, and won the Dr. J. L. Luke Purse, today's feature race. It was a keen battle that lasted throughout the 6½ furlongs, and found Jockey Sammy Palumbo riding his third winner of the day and hanging a defeat on Jockey Buddy Root.

Doreen, paying $10, ran the route in 1:21 over a fast track and through a light drizzle.

The crowd of 6,000 played the bulk of its money on Far North, owned by Mrs. Randolph Scott, and carrying her Montpelier colors. The young filly was backed as if the race had already been run and the betting closed with the "even" sign hanging beside her name on the approximate odds board. She dropped back going to the turn. Apprentice Hacker made a mild bid with her along the back stretch and then she stopped, leaving her backers as cold as her name.

The race was a two-horse proposition with Xmas Carol setting most of the pace, but failing to cope with the closing drive of Doreen.

Sammy Palumbo began the day with a winner and the majority of the customers started with a winner. Reigh Tetrarch, a $3.20 favorite, won by four lengths and was not extending himself. Harold Jr. showed a lot of early speed and finished second. Counsellor Billy closed well, to be third.

Shorts, after being short on speed recently, popped with a good race and drew only a scattered backing. The gray gelding paid $28.40 and romped home ahead of Anya and Keswick Hill. The last named, the favorite, was miserably handled by Jockey Lou Machado. Root rode the winner.

Jockey Herbie Lauch, who has been performing at Wheeling, climbed aboard Kenner for the third race and had only to guide as the 4-year-old scampered home five lengths in front of Custer. The latter was in trouble at the first turn and closed full of run. Gold Streak was listlessly ridden by Jockey E. Benham.

The favorite players booed and rebooed the finish of the fourth race. Bursting and White Sweets, the latter the public choice, hit the wire as a team and the judges called Bursting. An $18 mutuel was displayed. Bursting set all the pace and from the press box appeared to have lasted. Boulderdam was third. Hacker rode the winner.

MISS EFE, handled along while pressing pace of JUSTA GIRO, responded to strong handling and barely lasted. HELEN BAB, allowed to drop back going to first turn, was under restraint to stretch and closed with a terrific rush. JUSTA GIRO saved ground while setting pace and fought it out willingly.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:56. Off 4:57. Winner, G. Russell's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOREEN, $10.00, $5.80, $5.40; XMAS CAROL, $5.20, $4.00; CHANNING, $6.60.

DOREEN, closest to pace of XMAS CAROL while rated, rallied gamely when placed to drive and was up in concluding stride. XMAS CAROL, off poorly, was rushed to get to front, saved ground while setting pace and barely failed to last. CHANNING improved position steadily on outside from early beginning and closed full of run. FAR NORTH was allowed to settle into best stride, improved position with rush on inside along backstretch, but weakened badly thereafter.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:28. Off 5:29½. Winner, Mrs. D. T. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOT AND SHELL, $7.20, $3.80, $2.80; PASSING SUN, $3.60, $2.80; TULEYRIES STAR, $3.40.

SHOT AND SHELL, going in best form and hustled to get forward position in early stages, disposed of TULEYRIES STAR to take command and was not seriously threatened thereafter. PASSING SUN lacked early speed, circled his field and closed gamely. TULEYRIES STAR, rushed off feet while shaking off KALEIDA and setting pace, weakened in closing test.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:58. Off 5:59. Winner, F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE SWAGMAN, $5.60, $3.60, $2.80; LIGHT ACTION, $12.80, $5.60; DAY LETTER, $3.20.

THE SWAGMAN, steadied along to the backstretch, went around leaders with bold rush to take command, drew out and won with speed in reserve. LIGHT ACTION, under restraint for a half, improved position gradually and was best of the others. DAY LETTER shook off BYNUM'S RUN to get definite lead, but weakened gradually thereafter.

Business Turn Upward Seen Close at Hand

Revival in Late Summer Expected by Standard Statistics Co.

"Developments during the recent past provide basis for the belief that the low point of the current depression will be reached in the near future, and that a revival of at least seasonal proportions will get under way by late summer or early fall. This is not to say that an uninterrupted recovery is in immediate prospect or that a cyclical rise lasting for several years is about to begin. There still are too many uncertainties in the situation to justify any such conclusive forecast at this time. Nevertheless, there are a number of constructive factors now present which warrant a more optimistic attitude toward the outlook for business over the next few months.

"There can be no doubt whatever that business sentiment has taken a definite turn for the better within the last few weeks. Perhaps the most striking example of this is the strong recovery in the security markets. Stock prices long have been regarded as an indicator of sentiment and also of barometric significance. A rising trend of share prices of the type witnessed in the last few weeks seldom fails to forecast a rising trend of business.

Steel Prices.

"Another sensitive indicator is the movement of scrap steel quotations. Scrap prices have moved up successively in recent weeks, and if precedent is followed, this development points to an upturn in the rate of steel production. The rate of operations, in fact, already has turned upwards slightly.

"Paradoxical though it may seem, the recent production in the finished steel prices also is a constructive development. Despite the fact that steel production has tobogganed for ten months and that demand has been stagnant, producers avoided price reductions. They sensibly reasoned that lower quotations would provide no stimulus to demand; that a decision regarding downward revision might well be postponed until there was some indication of an improvement in orders.

"Thus, the lower prices announced last week indicate that producers sense a change in the stagnant conditions which have characterized the industry for many months. They evidently believe that the time is ripe to provide the stimulus which they have been holding back for so long. No great rush to buy steel is expected as a result of this action, but there should be at least a moderate release of those orders held back pending a readjustment in prices."

Copper, Zinc Lifted Again

New York, July 1 (AP).—The price of domestic copper was advanced to 9½ cents a pound today and zinc was also lifted as strong demand in non-ferrous metal markets continued.

Yesterday a leading producer increased the quotation on copper to 9¼ cents a pound from the 9-cent level prevailing since May 19. Today another producer, who had failed to meet yesterday's rise, lifted its quotation to 9½ cents, and others quickly fell into line. The high this year was 10⅞ cents touched January 11. The May 19 figure was the low, a bottom since late 1935.

Domestic zinc price was increased to 4.75 cents a pound, up ¼ cent, by some producers, although one large factor in the market was said not to have immediately followed the advance. The previous quotation of 4½ cents had been in effect since June 24. The price has risen from a low of 4 cents on April 14.

Utah Copper to Reopen.

Salt Lake City, July 1 (AP).—The Utah Copper Co., which operates the world's largest open-cut copper mine and which is a subsidiary of the Kennecott Copper Co., will reopen its mines and mills near here August 1, "according to present expectations," General Manager D. D. Moffat said today. The company shut down June 16 because of a stagnant market and an accumulating surplus. Moffat said the 3,300 employes laid off would be re-employed.

Gold and Silver Imports Decline

Private gold hoarding in Europe cut down shipments of the metal to the United States to $2,827,027 in the week ended June 24. Two weeks previously, shipments amounted to $32,129,019 in one week.

Silver imports also declined to $1,739,948, or about $4,000,000 less than usual. Mexico sent $867,417 and Canada $359,813.

Stocks Climb 27.4 Per Cent In June Rise

New York, July 1.—The value of listed stocks scored one of the sharpest advances on record in June, according to the monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. In reversing the prolonged decline the list rose $3,578,988,000 or 27.4 per cent. In the previous month the stocks declined 6 per cent.

The building shares scored the sharpest recovery, gaining 44 per cent. Steels rose 41.7 per cent, railroad equipment 38.6 per cent, and motor shares 34 per cent. Oils added one-third of their value and mines gained almost as much, while electric equipments and rails each climbed 30.1 per cent. The smallest recovery occurred in the utilities, which added only 20.6 per cent. Miscellaneous industrials, with an advance of 21.6, lagged behind the retail section.

The combined list had a value at the end of the month of $16,624,930,000, the highest figure since October, 1937.

Stocks Resume Vigorous Upswing After Profit-Taking; Utilities a Feature.

New York, July 1.—The amazing stock market marched along the upward trail again today after an irregular opening, absorbing a bit of profit-taking in its stride, recovering the small losses sustained Thursday and reaching new high ground on the move. Individual issues finished with gains of 1 to 5 points. Volume, at 2,024,820 shares, was about half a million units under turnover in the preceding session. The 100 representative big board stocks closed 1.02 points up. Of 895 issues traded, 602 advanced against 141 declines and 152 unchanged. No less than 71 listed shares recorded new 1938 highs.

Commodity Strength.

Bullish operations were by no means confined to stocks. Bonds were steady to firm in all departments with a big bulge in speculative rails. Cotton added more than a dollar a bale to indicated value. Wheat held up after early weakness in response to rises to 1 to 2 cents a bushel in coarse grains. The forward price movement in other commodities was aggressively resumed. Rubber futures, for example, soared 49 to 57 points; hides skyrocketed 52 to 58 points; silk boomed on panicky short covering and speculative buying, while copper futures fully reflected the ¼ to ½ cent mark up in the spot price for the metal.

Action of security markets on the brink of a holiday surprised quite a few in the financial district. Selling which had developed Thursday, causing a minor recession, was assumed to be the start of a movement to lighten commitments over Independence Day, as well as being a logical course for traders to follow after the sharp rise. Apparently, however, some analysts have underestimated the proportion of public buying which contributed to recent activity, and over-emphasized speculative participation. It requires more than the attraction of a few points profit to cause the average citizen to dispose of newly acquired stocks.

Response to News.

While all groups advanced easily and substantially, the coppers, steels, motors, rails and utilities stood out, all with some justification as a result of the day's news. In addition to betterment of prices for copper metal and heavy volume of speculative buying in both spot and futures markets, announcement was made of resumption of operations in certain areas by one of the large copper companies. Utilities rose to the accompaniment of suggestions that very substantial modernization and expansion programs are being developed, as well as from the expectation that Government loans will be made available to select groups in the industry.

Gossip of the day included reports of an extensive short position in certain American shares in London, but this was generally doubted. Buying from abroad, it is said, continues on a small scale.

United Corporation became the most active stock at a good advance on announcement that a special meeting has been called to restate the company's portfolio preliminary to resumption of dividends on $3 preference. Schenley Distillers rose 3 points on news of the $6,000,000 Pennsylvania tax decision in the company's favor. Seven of the fifteen most active shares were in the power division. Among popular issues which recorded gains of a point or more were Atchison, American Water Works, Westinghouse, Steel common, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Johns Manville, Goodyear, Du Pont, Consolidated Edison, Chrysler Motors and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Rail Bonds Strong.

Listed bonds with a speculative aspect resumed the upswing today after early hesitation. Wide gains were recorded in various carrier issues, despite the removal of many bonds from the New York State legal list. United States Treasury and highest rated corporate bonds held to former levels. In the foreign section, German bonds were active and higher on the new British arrangement, which possibly will be reflected in better treatment also of American holders. Turnover in all issues was $7,740,000.

Railroad bonds remained the most active, with the changes in the legal list of no immediate consequence, since the action reflected measures long since assessed by the financial district. Default carrier issues were less in demand. Alleghany Corporation issues forged ahead, and some of the utility holding bonds also did well. Local tractions were unsettled, but most other special groups improved.

Long term United States Treasury issues showed gains and losses to 4-32 point, with the market price structure unchanged. Guaranteed bonds of the Home and Farm Corporations were dull. The impending holiday suspension kept trading low in high grade issues, and best corporate bonds were idle for the same reason.

German and Austrian government bonds improved on the Berlin agreement to meet British demands for payment on British holdings. Other European default issues were dull, but Latin-American issues tended to improve. Argentines advanced on the disclosure that a new loan impends. Canadian and Scandinavian loans were firm. The Japanese group had one of its rare recovery periods, but the advance did not carry far.

United Corp. Plans Heavy Write-Down

New York, July 1 (AP).—United Corporation, utility investing company sponsored by the Morgan-Bonbright interests, announced today it would advise stockholders to authorize a revaluation of its investment holdings to market values on June 30. This would involve a write-down of the investment account from $560,049,445 to $152,436,018. The difference would be charged to capital surplus.

George H. Howard, president of the corporation, said the proposed restatement of book costs of the company's investment holdings, consisting principally of utility common stocks, was for the purpose of meeting any contingencies under the public utility act, and also to effect changes in the corporate structure necessary for a resumption of dividends on the preferred stock.

Stockholders will consider the proposal at a special meeting on August 11, at Wilmington, Del.

Rye and Oats Jump, Helping Wheat Prices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 1.—Late jumps of rye and oats markets, together with renewed soaring of securities, more than overcame wheat declines today that at times totaled 1¼ cents.

Maximum gains of 1⅞ cents for oats and 2⅝ cents for rye were attributed to unfavorable crop reports and removal of a Federal tax of 3 cents effective today. Cereal manufacturing interests were active buyers of oats, July delivery in particular.

Transient setbacks of wheat values resulted largely from new unofficial monthly crop estimates. These, although nearly 100,000,000 bushels under the average a month ago were well above both an estimate issued yesterday and the 1937 final figures. Latest forecasts of spring crop production, domestic and Canadian too, were bigger than most traders had looked for.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¼ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, July 73¾@73⅞, September 75⅛@75¼; corn also unchanged to ¼ up, July 57⅛@57¼, September 58⅜@58½; oats ⅛@1¼ advanced; rye showing 1⅝@2 cents bulge, and provisions 2 cents to 30 cents gain.

Cotton Gains Over $1 a Bale

New York, July 1 (AP).—Cotton advanced more than $1 a bale today on renewed Wall Street and trade buying. October sold up from 8.67 to 8.92 and closed at 8.90, with final prices 21 to 23 points net higher.

The market opened 2 to 4 points higher in response to steady Liverpool cables, but liquidation soon appeared on reports of favorable weather in the belt. After prices had dipped a point or two under the previous close, the market developed renewed steadiness as stocks turned firmer.

Demand became more active in the afternoon as Wall Street and commission house buying developed and recent sellers rebought. Trade demand was more active as Wall Street reported improved sales of cotton goods.

Japanese Buying From U. S. Halved

By the Associated Press.

Japanese purchases of American goods in May were only half of what they were in the same month last year. The Commerce Department said yesterday that Japanese purchases during May amounted to $18,074,000, compared with $36,186,000 in May, 1937.

The total of Japanese purchases has fallen behind last year in previous months, records showed, but not nearly as much as in May. For the first five months of the year Japanese purchases totaled $109,659,000, compared with $140,447,000 in the similar period last year.

Chesapeake Corp. Cuts Dividend to 35 Cents

New York, July 1 (AP).—Directors of Chesapeake Corporation today declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on the common stock, payable July 15 to holders of record July 11. In previous quarters recently, 75 cents a share has been paid.

The lower payment ordered at this time was apparently affected by the fact that Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., of which Chesapeake Corporation owns over 2,000,000 shares, recently reduced its common dividend from 75 cents to 25 cents.

Watts Ties O'Brien for Golf Medal

Card Record 70's Over Cascades in Old Dominion Play.

By the Associated Press.

Cascades Golf Club, Hot Springs, Va., July 1.—Smashing the Cascades course amateur record twice today, James O. (Jimmy) Watts, jr., Lynchburg, and Don O'Brien, Richmond, tied for the qualifying medal in the twenty-sixth annual State golf tournament with 70s, one under a previously invincible par.

The sub-par cards of Watts and O'Brien were the best ever recorded by an amateur from the 6,690-back tees in the 14-year-old existence of this layout, which is recognized as among the most difficult in the country. Robert Trent Jones, famous links architect, recently selected two Cascades holes—the twelfth and thirteenth for his mythical perfect golf layout.

The old record of 71 was held jointly by Billy Howell and Bobby Riegel, former State champions; Phil Perkins, an Englishmen, and Johnny Fischer, former National Amateur champion, a 75 by John Shorey, Staunton, was good enough to win the medal here in 1937.

Track Stars Await Meet

A. A. U. Affair Opening Today at Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—A steady drizzle was falling here tonight on the eve of the National A. A. U.'s golden anniversary track and field championships, as entrants in the junior events awaited the signal to open the two-day meet.

An 18-year-old Los Angeles schoolboy, Baylor Maynard, is looked on as a possible winner in the pole vault. He holds the world scholastic record of 13 feet 9 inches and reported to have cleared 14 feet in tone-ups here.

Fred Wolcott, from Texas, winner of both the high and low hurdles in the National Collegiate meet, is entered in the junior 100-meters event. He has run the 100-yard dash in 9.05 seconds.

The field for the 1,500-meters run includes Marston Girard, San Mateo, Calif., junior college athlete who has run a 4:19.6 mile, and Dick Frey, Michigan State miler.

The combined junior-senior 10,000-meter run attracted the entries of Lou Gregory, Millrose A. A., a National A. A. U. 20-kilometer winner in the past, and his teammate, Eino Pennti, defending champion.

On the Culpeper Horse Show Grounds, where extra stables have been provided for the unusually large number of horses entered for the show, large horse vans have been arriving for several days. It would have been the third out. But as it was the Sox scored three additional runs in the inning.

Husband Beaten, Wife Is Attacked; Pair Seized Here

Police said the victim, Mrs. Katharine Anderson, 21, and her husband, Langdon A. Anderson, were returning from a cafe on Central avenue, in Capitol Heights, Md., to their home in the 100 block of Baltimore avenue, Capitol Heights, when three men pulled up beside them in an automobile and offered them a ride.

They drove in the opposite direction. Near a wood, they beat Anderson, and then attempted criminal assault on Mrs. Anderson, police were told. They then drove away with her in the automobile, leaving her husband badly beaten. She escaped them near her home.

Army Awards $14,433,196 to Build Aircraft

Closes Fiscal Year, Opens Drive to Put Corps at Full Strength.

Awarding a series of contracts totaling $14,433,196 for 98 of the most potent military planes in the world, the War Department yesterday opened a drive to bring the Army Air Corps to full authorized strength of 2,320 planes by July 1, 1939.

Announced by Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson, the awards closed the Army's buying program for the 1938 fiscal year and opened the way for the Department to begin its 1939 program, which calls for the expenditure of $33,150,000 for 426 additional aircraft.

Seventy-eight twin-engined Douglas B-18-A bombers, capable of traveling 225 miles per hour. This brings the Army's quota of these planes to 250. The order will cost $5,703,287.

Seven new-type attack planes, costing $289,180, from the Vultee Aircraft Division of the Aviation Manufacturing Corporation, Downey, Calif. These all-metal craft carry a crew of three and 600 pounds of bombs, and reach a speed of 230 miles per hour.

The Department placed contracts totaling $2,573,288 for 276 engines with the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the Allison Engineering Co., and the Pratt & Whitney Division, United Aircraft Corporation.

The contracts brought the total Army aviation purchasing program for the fiscal year 1938 to $42,500,000.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a bill authorizing the War Department to spend $2,000,000 to develop the autogyro and other types of rotary-winged aircraft.

The measure providing for the expenditure was introduced by Representative Frank J. G. Dorsey, of Pennsylvania.

South Paris, Me., July 1 (U.P.).—Mrs. Ruby Carroll and her 18-year-old daughter, Barbara, key figures in the bizarre murder investigation that resulted a week ago in the indictment of their husband-father, Francis M. Carroll, for the slaying of Dr. James G. Littlefield, have mysteriously vanished, it was learned tonight.

It was believed the were spirited away by authorities in order to take Barbara and her mother out of reach of news reporters and others. Earlier, Special Assistant Attorney General Ralph M. Ingalls said he would ask Superior Judge William H. Fisher to protect the pair "from molestation" after learning a newspaper syndicate was anxious to contract for their life stories.

Cleric Will Wed Fellow-Student At College Here

The friendship of two students at the Columbia College of Christian Education—one a suburban minister and the other a District of Columbia Sunday school teacher—will culminate in their wedding August 7 at the Fourth Presbyterian Church, it was learned yesterday.

They are the Rev. George S. Hixson, pastor serving the Suitland and Landover (Md.) Christian churches and Congressional Library employe, and Miss Alice Domino, stenographer at the Interstate Commerce Commission, who instructs a Sunday school class at Calvary Baptist Church.

HEAR THAT, MOM?
WHEN SHOULD A BOY BE ADDRESSED AS MISTER? OR WEARING HIS FIRST LONG PANTS
A VITAL QUESTION IS FINALLY SETTLED

Bob Burns Says—

The older I get the more I realize the importance and lasting qualities of early training. I got the idea of illustrating a point by telling a story about it from a school teacher I had when I was a boy.

One day in English class I asked her what a rhetorical question was and she says, "Well, a rhetorical question is one where you don't expect an answer, such as 'what has Congress been doing all these years?' "

Study Ordered To Get Line on Needs of South

Emergency Council Head Calls Parley of Leaders for Tuesday.

President Roosevelt arranged with his National Emergency Council yesterday for a survey of the South, its problems and needs, with particular reference to the wage-hour law which was fought by many Southern Democrats in Congress.

As the first step in this undertaking, Lowell Mellett, executive director of the Emergency Council, called a meeting of 22 prominent southern citizens, businessmen, farmers, educators, publicists, bankers, and labor leaders, for Tuesday. Representatives of Federal agencies also will participate and address the gathering.

In directing his attention to the south in this affair the President shows a special concern for this section, which is disclosed also in the itinerary of his trip to California. His travel will be particularly through the South, with stops in Kentucky, Oklahoma and Texas.

Other Surveys Proposed.

Other sections of the country may be surveyed if the present assessment is successful. Industry ownership and conditions of work, child labor, farm ownership, soil erosion, taxation, credit, employment, education, housing, capital resources, relief and transportation may be included in the study.

The President initiated the survey with this letter to Mellett:

Discussions in Congress and elsewhere in connection with legislation affecting the economic welfare of the Nation have served to point out the difference in the problems and needs of the different sections of the country and have indicated the advisability of a clear and concise statement of these needs and problems in a form readily available, not only to the members of Congress, but to the public generally.

Attention has recently been focused particularly upon the South in connection with the wages and hours bill, and I should like the National Emergency Council to undertake the preparation of such a statement of the problems and needs of the South. In preparing this statement I suggest that you call freely upon the various governmental departments and administrative agencies for information as to matters with which they are especially acquainted, and also that you request the assistance of Southerners well known for their interest in the South and familiarity with its problems.

The outcome of this undertaking may indicate the advisability of similar studies with reference to other sections of the country.

Those Invited.

Mellett invited this list to the meeting Tuesday: Maj. Thomas Allen, businessman, Memphis; Dr. B. F. Ashe, president, University of Miami, Fla.; Gov. Carl Bailey of Arkansas; W. B. Bizzell, president, State University, Oklahoma; L. O. Crosby, lumberman, Mississippi; Judge Blanton Fortson, Athens, Ga.; Frank Graham, president, University of North Carolina; Attorney James Hammond, South Carolina; Gerald W. Johnson, journalist, Baltimore Evening Sun; Gen. John C. Persons, banker, Alabama; Prof. Charles W. Pipkin, Louisiana State University; J. H. Reynolds, president, Hendricks College, Arkansas; S. L. Smith, Peabody College, Tennessee; Robert J. Smith, businessman, Texas; Alexander Speer, businessman, Virginia; Joseph G. Tillman, Georgia; J. Skottowe Wannamaker, president American Cotton Association, South Carolina; Carl White, A. F. L. leader, Texas; Miss Lucy Mason, State representative C. I. O., Georgia; Col. Leroy Hodges, comptroller of Virginia; Barry Bingham, publisher, Louisville Courier Journal; Col. P. H. Callahan, businessman, Louisville, Ky.

Owner of Cafe Is Rearrested in Boxer's Slaying

Cullinane Is Seized After He Is Cleared by Coroner's Jury.

Cleared by a coroner's jury in the fatal stabbing of Angelo Pappas, amateur boxer, John Jeremiah Cullinane was released under $1,500 bond yesterday on a homicide charge as the district attorney's office prepared to present the case to the grand jury despite the finding.

Upon orders of William S. Tarver, assistant district attorney, the 34-year-old former Catholic University baseball pitcher was rearrested immediately after Pappas' death was ruled accidental and the result of of his own "carelessness."

The slain youth, who was 20 and who last year won the District A. A. U. 118-pound boxing title, lived in the 1200 block of G street northeast. He died in Sibley Hospital Tuesday night shortly after an altercation with Cullinane at the latter's cafe at 803 Third street northwest.

Ordinarily exoneration of a suspect by a coroner's jury results in his being freed. However, testimony of several witnesses and the positive assertion by Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, assistant coroner, that Pappas could not have received the fatal meat-knife thrust by lunging against Cullinane, prompted Tarver to have the cafe operator rearrested.

Most favorable testimony in the accused man's behalf was that of George W. Binkley, a salesman, of the 400 block of Allison street northwest. He told the jury Pappas was boisterous, struck Cullinane first with his fist and yelled, "I'll kill him," as he held a chair aloft. The chair was not thrown, however, Binkley said.

Questioning by Tarver and Charles M. Ireland, jr., representing the Pappas family, failed to alter the salesman's belief that the young boxer ran into the long knife, held in Cullinane's left hand. In the other hand, said Binkley, was a meat cleaver.

Asked by Ireland why he did not report to police until the inquest yesterday, the salesman said he did not realize the seriousness of Pappas' wound until he read of his death in Wednesday morning's papers.

Maurice H. Bowers, attendant at a filling station across the street from the restaurant, also testified that Cullinane held a cleaver in one hand and a knife in the other. He said he did not see the stabbing.

Binkley said the row began when Cullinane asked Pappas to stop cursing. Previously it was reported that the younger man was angry because the cafe operator planned to close up his establishment to take a District job, which would have cost Pappas's brother-in-law his job at the restaurant.

Reich Will Pay British Debt After Threats

Agreement Follows Plan to Impound Credits; U. S. Not Affected.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 1.—Germany assumed responsibility today for the principal loans of annexed Austria in a broad settlement of greater Germany's obligations to Great Britain.

The agreement was on a strictly two-nation basis, excluding all other countries holding both German and Austrian bonds, and followed threats Britain would commandeer German commercial credits here to pay interests on the debts if Germany continued to disavow Austrian obligations.

The status of debts owed the United States remained unchanged. The United States is not in the same favorable bargaining position as Great Britain toward Germany.

U. S. Lacks 'Lever.'

Germany buys more from the United States than she sells—just the opposite of the Anglo-German relations—and consequently the United States lacks the same trade lever to force a settlement.

(Since April 6 the State Department in Washington has sent three communications to Germany seeking settlement of the Austrian debts to the United States, amounting to $20,000,000. Germany has not replied.)

Interest Reduced.

Included in the Anglo-German agreement were reductions for British in interest rates on two loans floated to help Germany's reparations settlements.

The 1924 Dawes loan was cut from seven per cent interest to five per cent and two per cent cumulative sinking fund. A similar arrangement was made for the Austrian seven per cent loan of 1930.

Interest on the 1930 Young loan was reduced from 5½ per cent to 4½ per cent and one per cent cumulative sinking fund beginning after two years. The Saarbruecken loan was similarly handled.

2 Escaped Youths Admit Robberies

Two Washington youths, who escaped June 4 from the District Home for the Feebleminded at Laurel, Md., yesterday admitted responsibility for two robberies and an attempted holdup in the District Sunday night.

The boys, 17 and 23 years old, confessed they had snatched a pocketbook containing $27 from Miss Catherine Creque, of 1822 Wyoming avenue northwest. They then pointed a loaded gun at Mrs. Jean Pritchard, 17 Church street northwest, but fled when she screamed.

At a bakery in the 400 block of Ninth street northwest, owned by Leon Herbert, the youths broke in and stole cakes. The older youth gave himself up to police Wednesday, and the other was arrested yesterday at his home.

W. W. Spaid Heirs Estimate Estate Above $1,000,000

William W. Spaid, later partner in the firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., investment brokers, left an estate unofficially estimated at more than $1,000,000, it was disclosed yesterday when a petition for probate of the will was filed in United States District Court.

Spaid, who died in New York City May 21, left the bulk of his estate to his widow and son, Mrs. Bain Spaid, of the Westchester Apartments, and William Spaid, of Arizona, who as executors presented the petition for probate.

The executors advised the court that Spaid, at his death owned a two-thirds interest in W. B. Hibbs & Co., the capital of which amounted to $1,500,000, and a one-third interest in property at 1325 Massachusetts avenue northwest, assessed at $27,824.

Mother, Deceived On Death, Awaits Columbo Letters

Los Angeles, July 1 (AP).—Mrs. Julia Columbo, in better health at 78 than in any recent year, patiently waited today for the mailman to bring her another letter from her favorite son, Russ, the crooner, who was killed nearly four years ago. She was too ill then to be told of his death.

Her family began a deception. They wrote letters in his name. They invented details of a career that took him abroad and prevented him, because of fame and fortune, from having time to return. A letter arrives each week signed with the crooner's name.

Each month, however, a genuine letter arrives for Mrs. Julia Columbo. It is from an insurance company. Russ had named his mother beneficiary of a $50,000 policy on his life. Without her knowing how and why, the company pays her $398 monthly.
